From Grassroots to Global

Hans Karl Peterlini is a professor of education at the University of Klagenfurt in Austria and founder of the Unesco Chair on Global Citizenship Education – Culture of Diversity and Peace. His main research interest is on how individuals and societies can learn to improve their living conditions, develop a culture of peace, deal better with inequalities and take care for the planet.

Christiane Faymann is a trained dressmaker and has a diploma in theatre pedagogy as well as a bachelor's degree in educational science from the University of Klagenfurt. Her professional focus lies in transformative and play-based learning, especially in theatre and arts-based approaches in education. She has been part of the Unesco Chair's Global Campus Online team since the beginning and is now responsible for organizing and hosting the network meetings.

Elia Rinne has significantly shaped the Global Campus Online project over three years with an academic background in Environmental Sciences and Global Citizenship Education, and practical experience as a teacher and youth worker. Currently, they work as an educator, workshop facilitator, and project manager, weaving their commitment to global social justice into all their endeavors.
