I would like to thank the University of Zurich for funding my PhD thesis, which serves as the base of this book, with various grants and scholarships.

I am further indebted to Ashkal Alwan for providing me with a workspace in times of sparse electricity, the Orient Institute of Beirut for granting me an affiliation and access to their library during COVID-19 when it was closed to the public, and the Faculty of Arts and Art History at the American University of Beirut for also giving me an affiliation and allowing me to be a guest auditor in the lecture 'Lebanese Art After the Wars' by Fares Chalabi, who introduced me to a substantial overview of art theories regarding art from Lebanon.

I also want to thank all artists and image-makers, particularly Rabih Mroué, who generously shared images of their works and allowed me to publish these as well as parts of the interviews I conducted with them in this book.
