

Acknowledgments

There are a number of people without whose support, kindness, and enthusiasm this would have been a very different book (if one at all).

I am grateful for the financial support that I received for three years in the form of a Ph.D. scholarship by the Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft which, crucially, included funding for research trips to the National Theatre Archive, London, and to Geneva for Mary Shelley's Frankenstein manuscripts. The Graduiertenkolleg "Materialität und Produktion" at Heinrich-Heine-University Düsseldorf provided numerous opportunities to test out my ideas, and I would like to thank all of its members for their input and interest.

I would like to express my appreciation and gratitude to the Messe Düsseldorf GmbH and to the Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek Düsseldorf for the additional funding that I received.

Roger Lüdeke's support as first advisor to my Ph.D. thesis has been invaluable. I would like to offer my heartfelt thanks for the curiosity, attentiveness, and precision with which he has engaged with the numerous drafts, and the often peculiar ideas expressed therein, which I threw at him over the years. Vittoria Borsò has provided inspiration and intellectual mentorship long before she officially stepped in as second advisor; but I would especially like to thank her for the generosity and spontaneity with which she took on the role officially – and on rather short notice, too. Reinhold Göring has accompanied the project in its early stages, and I am likewise grateful to him for his ideas and useful suggestions.

Then, there are a number of people with sharp minds and big hearts to whom I am indebted in equal measure for their friendship, and their professional support: Martin Bartelmus, Eric Baudner, Patrick Bray, Victoria Herche, Arne Leopold, Maria Ostrovskaya, and Maria Tittel. It is a privilege to know you, and to have been – and be – able to talk to you has made – and keeps making – all the difference. Benjamin's enthusiasm and trust in my abilities sustained me; and I would like to thank Ruth and Sophia for their spirit, wisdom, and humour.

Last, but really first, there is my father, Dieter Hugo Danebrock, who I would not know how to even begin to thank. He is, sadly, unable to read this book. He did read the manuscript, though; and I feel that I have his blessings.
