Acknowledgements

This book is the updated version of my PhD dissertation, which I submitted to the Faculty of Economics and Social Sciences at the University of Hamburg in October 2012 and which I defended in May 2014. The completion of this project would have been impossible without the support of a number of people and institutions. Michael Brzoska provided very helpful comments and much appreciated encouragement throughout my work on this dissertation, which he generously agreed to supervise. In addition, he offered valuable advice and help regarding the big and small challenges of organizing life in academia. He also agreed to publish my dissertation in this book series. Moreover, I want to thank Christopher Daase at the Goethe-University Frankfurt for agreeing to act as a second supervisor and for offering the opportunity to present this project in his doctoral colloquium in Frankfurt.

The Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung provided generous financial support through a dissertation grant between 2008 and 2011, for which I am very grateful. The Institute for Peace Research and Security Policy at the University Hamburg (IFSH) and its staff members offered a hospitable place to work and an inspiring personal and intellectual environment during the last six years. I am especially indebted to Raphael Bossong, Hans-Georg Ehrhart, Regina Heller, Julian Junk and Martin Kahl for collaborations and discussions that inspired and shaped many of the ideas presented in this book. Susanne Bund provided reliable assistance in preparing the final book manuscript. I also want to thank the officials that took the time to share their views and experiences during interviews in Brussels and New York.

Most importantly, I want to thank my family for their unconditional love and support, not only but also during the course of this project. This book is dedicated to them.
