

Contents

What is this about? An Overview 7

 The most important findings 8

 Orphans and vulnerable children – who do we mean? 15

I. Children of the Crisis – Living Conditions

in Namibia 25

 A simple life 25

 Writing about Africa? Postcolonial hesitancy 31

 Hileni: a voice from Katutura 37

 Namibia: a post-war society? 46

 The war generation and its children 51

 Transformations with catastrophic consequences 54

 Orphans and vulnerable children: the experiences of children 59

 Excursus: children’s rights 63

II. Children in Rural Areas 69

 Egumbo: The situation of children in rural areas 69

 Observations and experiences of a principal 82

 Children write about themselves 85

 Linea and her children 93

 Child labour, rural culture, and its devaluation by schools 98

 The market, the garbage, the millet.

 Three zones in an African city. Three lifestyles of children 102

III. Children in Urban Katutura	109
Kabashu: The situation of children in Silvertown	109
Her name is actually Ottilie	115
Once again: the voices of children	116
Excursus: The very last desert. Children graves	125
IV. The New Civil Society Places – Refuges for Children in Need	127
Civil society initiatives: an overview	127
Lucia: a lively woman and her fosterlings	135
The bushman	141
Lucia's plot and her egumbo	142
Lucia's daughter C.	144
Abandoned children: Agatha and the Baby Haven	145
Children in poverty: Frieda and the Havana Soup Kitchen	153
Homeless children: Rosa and the Dolam Children's Home	156
Infants and HIV-positive mothers: Mount Sinai Center	162
Excursus: On the colonial history of orphanages in Namibia	165
Conclusion: African Children.
European Childhoods	169
Living in societies of plenty. Surviving in societies of dearth	169
How do children experience the human condition?
Approaches to an overdue cultural comparison	171
Appendix	179
The research project	179
Acknowledgements	180
Bibliography	181