

List of Contributors

Paul Cliteur is a professor of Jurisprudence at Leiden Law School. He was the academic director of the Institute for the Interdisciplinary Study of the Law at Leiden Law School from 2002 to 2010. Paul has obtained degrees in law and philosophy. His research focuses on ethics and the philosophical foundations of the law, in particular moral dilemmas concerning the multicultural society and the relationship between law and religion. Paul is the author of “The Secular Outlook: In Defense of Moral and Political Secularism” (Wiley-Blackwell, 2010).

Ivan Hare is a practising barrister at Blackstone Chambers in London. He specialises in public law and human rights cases. He has published widely on public law and, in particular, freedom of expression and hate speech. He jointly edited and contributed to “Extreme Speech and Democracy” (Oxford University Press, 2009) and is one of the editors and authors of “De Smith’s Judicial Review” 7th edition (Sweet and Maxwell, 2015). He was a Fellow of Trinity College Cambridge from 1991 until 2003 and a University Lecturer in the Faculty of Law.

Rumy Hasan is a Senior Lecturer at Sussex University’s Science Policy Research Unit. Having focused earlier in his career on the economies of East Asia and the former Eastern Bloc, in more recent years his attention has shifted to issues relating to multiculturalism, multifaithism, social cohesion, and the nexus between religious identity and society. Rumy holds a DPhil from the University of Oxford.

Tom Herrenberg is a PhD candidate and lecturer at Leiden Law School, and a visiting researcher at the University of Oxford. His areas of interest include freedom of expression, constitutional law, and legal philosophy.

Laetitia Houben received her LLB degree from Leiden Law School. Currently she is a Master's student (Jurisprudence and Philosophy of Law) at Leiden Law School. From 2013 until 2015, Laetitia was an Honours student.

David Nash is a professor in History at Oxford Brookes University and one of the Directors of the Centre for Inquiry (London). Before joining Oxford Brookes University, David taught British History at the Universities of Leicester and York. He is a fellow of the Royal Historical Society, a fellow of the Royal Society of Arts, and an Editor of the journal "Social and Cultural History." His areas of expertise include blasphemy laws, secularism and the history of secularisation. David is the author of "Blasphemy in the Christian World: A History" (Oxford University Press, 2007). He has also given evidence to the House of Lords and advised politicians in Britain, Eire, the United States and Australia on the subject of blasphemy.

Flemming Rose is a senior fellow at the Cato Institute in Washington D.C., and a former editor of the Danish newspaper Jyllands-Posten. He is the author of "The Tyranny of Silence: How One Cartoon Ignited a Global Debate on the Future of Free Speech" (Cato Institute, 2014) and "Hymn to Freedom" (2015).

Bastiaan Rijpkema is an Assistant Professor of Jurisprudence at Leiden University. He received his LLB in Law at Erasmus University Rotterdam (2010) and his LLM in Jurisprudence and Philosophy of Law (cum laude) from Leiden University (2011). In 2015 he obtained his PhD at Leiden University with a dissertation on militant democracy, which was published in Dutch as Weerbare democratie: de grenzen van democratische tolerantie (Nieuw Amsterdam, 2015). His main research interests lie in the field of political and legal philosophy, more specifically democratic theory and free speech. He co-edited a book with essays on animal rights: Bij de beesten af! Over dierenrecht en onrecht (Bert Bakker, 2013). He also co-edited Wat te doen met antidemocratische partijen? De oratie van George van den Bergh uit 1936 (Elsevier, 2014), a reissuing of the 1936 inaugural lecture of Amsterdam constitutional scholar George van den Bergh on antidemocratic parties.

Mirjam van Schaik is a lecturer and researcher at Leiden Law School. She studied at VU University Amsterdam and has a degree in law as well as one in philosophy of law. Mirjam is currently writing her thesis about the universal status of freedom of religion.

Michelle Slimmen is a Master's student (Civil Law) at Leiden Law School. She received a LLB degree in Tax Law as well as one in Dutch Law. During her period of study for her bachelor's degrees, Michelle was admitted to the Honours College. She serves as a student-assistant to the Department of Civil Law at Leiden Law School. In 2015, she studied at the University of Florida, Fredric G. Levin College of Law. Furthermore, Michelle is a board member of Mordenate College, a society which aims to support talented students at Leiden Law School.

