

Contents

Abstract	9
1. Introduction	11
1.1 Background	11
1.2 Research questions and methodology	15
1.3 Overview of the book	17

PART I

2. Theory of space production	21
2.1 Social space and space production	21
2.2 Spatial triad	24
2.3 Space production in China	30
3. Discourse on informality, and informality in China	35
3.1 International debate on informality and informal settlements	35
3.2 Urban villages - informal settlements in China	40
4. Discourse on migration and internal rural-urban migration in China	47
4.1 International debate on migration	47
4.2 Internal migration in China	51
5. Conceptual framework	61

PART II

6. Urbanisation and urban villages in China	65
6.1 Urbanisation in China with Chinese characteristics	65
6.2 Urban-rural dualism in China	69

6.3	An introduction to some well-researched urban villages	73
7.	The two case villages: Shigezhuang village and Dongxindian village	77
7.1	Historical development and basic information of the two case village	77
7.2	Demographic and dwelling profiles of migrants	80
8.	The space of governance and negotiation	85
8.1	The socio-political transformation of policies on migrants in Beijing	85
8.2	The impact of migrants on the institutions	93
8.3	Indigenous villagers and migrants	104
8.4	Development, transformation, and demolition of a 'dayuan'	112
8.5	Demolition of urban villages and eviction of 'low-end' labourers	114
9.	The space of everyday life	121
9.1	Housing construction and extensions	121
9.2	The couple who ran a grocery shop in Dongxindian	137
9.3	A construction worker and his family in Shigezhuang	142
9.4	The owner and caretaker of a 'dayuan' in Dongxindian	146
9.5	Young people living in apartment buildings in Dongxindian	151
10.	The space of two-directional linkage	155
10.1	Migrants as individuals – perception of the city as a place of work	155
10.2	Migrants as households – circulation of resources between sending and receiving areas	159
10.3	Migrants as a tongxiang community	164

PART III

11.	Synthesis – the spatial triad in the context of urban villages in China	173
11.1	The space of governance and negotiation	174
11.2	The space of everyday life	177
11.3	The space of two-directional linkage	181
11.4	The spatial triad – the interaction of three aspects of space production	184
12.	Conclusions and outlook	187
12.1	Research gaps addressed in the study	187
12.2	Conclusions and implications for theory and practice	188
12.3	Directions for future research	191

Acknowledgements	193
References	195
Appendix: Overview of the interviewees	207
List of tables	231
List of figures	233

