This book is a slightly updated and revised version of my dissertation, which I submitted at Friedrich-Alexander-University Erlangen-Nürnberg in 2024. Even if research and writing can feel lonesome at times, many people shaped the research project that has become this book – and it is truly a pleasure to get to thank them within these pages.

First and foremost, I would like to thank my supervisor, Heike Paul. I am beyond thankful for your guidance, your trust in this project – and in me –, and your personal and professional support over the many years that I (or we) have spent with this project. Thank you also for giving me space and time to think and write, and for the many other opportunities along the way.

I am also immensely grateful to my second reader, Katharina Gerund; thank you for providing invaluable critical feedback on parts of the manuscript, and for all the support and all the advice you have given me over the years, project-related and otherwise.

The members of the American Studies research colloquium and my colleagues at FAU Erlangen-Nürnberg have been a constant source of motivation and inspiration. I feel very fortunate that I had the opportunity to conduct my research in an environment of mutual support and encouragement. Thank you! I am also grateful that I was part of a supportive cohort of doctoral candidates for many years, who somehow also managed to all submit their dissertations in the same year: thanks to Jana Aresin, Axelle Germanaz, and Andrew Wildermuth. I owe special thanks to Klaus Lösch – for much appreciated critical feedback; to Annemarie Heuermann, Isabel Kalous, and Hana Vrdoljak; and to my friend and ‘collaborator’ Axelle Germanaz, for sharing this journey with me from start to finish! I do hope there will be many more joint adventures in the future.

Over the years I have also had the opportunity to present, discuss, and think about this work in a variety of other academic settings and with a number of inspiring and generous researchers and colleagues. I am very grateful that I was able to conduct research as a visiting fellow at the University of Oregon's Center for Environmental Futures in Eugene and would like to extend thanks to Marsha Weisiger and Stephanie LeMenager. Special thanks are also in order to the team behind the Bavarian American Academy's annual Summer Academy and the participants of 2019 in Regensburg, Berlin, and Nürnberg, and 2023 at the University of Kentucky in Lexington.

To my beloved 'gang' of friends – Kerstin, Max, Basti, Marion, Jonas, and Luisa – thank you; for asking the right amount of questions about 'the dissertation' and for taking my mind off it otherwise!

To my partner Markus and my baby Paul, who are experts at putting things in perspective and provide immense joy – thanks a million. Finally, thank you to my parents. Without you and your unwavering support this would not have been possible, not least because you provided excellent 'daycare' while I was in the final stages of writing.
