This book is the result of many conversations, some of which are documented as its contributions, and many others that happened before and during the work on Negentropic Explorations of Radio project. I would like to thank the contributors for their generosity and patience in working on text that comes out of the meetings and interviews. Among them, Miro Roman and Carl Colena provided much needed support in theoretical knowledge and practical computational techniques for understanding self-organizing maps and electromagnetic signals. Vahid Moosavi provided invaluable expertise when it came to programming self-organizing maps. I am grateful to Vera Bühlmann for inspiring me to think and read about categories and classes, feminist new materialism and abundance in digital data. I am indebted to the team of Critical Media Lab IXDM at the Basel Academy of Art and Design FHNW for hosting this project. Finally, without the numerous contributors to the SIGID wiki who shared their recordings, observations, and knowledge of radio communications this research would not have been possible.

To Gordan Savičić, my principal co-thinker in everything that has to do with computers and life, I cannot express my gratitude. He was the one to point me towards the SIGID wiki. He also made it possible for me to attend the long project meetings during the global pandemic. I am incredibly grateful to my children for being an endless source of fun and play, which made every day joyful, after all.
