Writing my PhD dissertation was an inspiring, exciting but also challenging endeavour. Many people accompanied and supported me during these years, to whom I would like to express my sincere gratitude.

First of all, I am deeply thankful to my first supervisor, Prof. Dr. Andreas Thiel, who introduced me to the field of polycentric governance and sparked my interest on the Guadalquivir, opened many doors for my professional development, and was a great source of inspiration. Thank you for making this entire process possible. Further, I am very thankful to all my inspiring colleagues from the STEER research project, where I learned how fruitful intense coordination can be, academically and personally. In particular, I want to mention here Ines Dombrowsky, Andrea Lenschow, Claudia Pahl-Wostl and Christian Knieper, as well as my great PhD colleagues Evelyn Lukat, Franziska Meergans and Mirja Schoderer for the many discussions on my PhD project. Furthermore, I am thankful to Elisa Kochskämper and Jens Newig – I am not sure whether I would have been interested in pursuing a PhD, let alone in the field of (Spanish) water governance without my experience at the research group at Leuphana University. Thanks a lot also to Sergio Villamayor-Tomas for taking over the role as second examiner of my thesis, and to Tobias Plieninger and (once again) to Andrea Lenschow for being part of my PhD committee.

This work would not have been possible without the many people whom I interviewed in Spain, and those who facilitated my field work. A special thanks therefore to Pilar Paneque and Jesús Vargas for supporting and receiving me at the Universidad Pablo de Olavide. Thanks also to Leandro Del Moral and Ramiro Martinez who put me in contact with so many inspiring persons in the Guadalquivir and the Jucar, respectively.

I received indispensable support from wonderful colleagues and dear friends, who made my PhD also a very enjoyable journey despite many challenges. A huge thanks goes to my colleagues Arvind Lakshmisha – thanks for having been the best office colleague I could have wished for! –, Ariane Götz, Sören Köpke and Christian Schleyer for their scientific and moral support in the last years; as well as to the rest of the team of the Section of International Agricultural Policy and Environmental Governance at the University of Kassel. Further, a deep thanks goes to my colleagues

“from above”, who have also become close friends: Maren Busch (I cannot thank you enough!), Matthias Middendorf and Tanja Matheis, as well as to Ronja Hüppé.

I also wish to thank my friends who are always with me, for so many years already, especially Johanna, Lisa, and Barbara; and my Kassel friends who have accompanied me in the last years while writing my PhD: Alena, Annika, Lara, May-Britt and Paula for all your support, not only but also during very tough times of the pandemic. Thank you, Baltasar, for supporting me in such a wonderful way in getting the thesis done & and for (literally) going through this time together. Last, I wish to deeply thank Fabian, Felix, Susanne, my wonderful grandmother, and my parents who, it seems, triggered my interest in combining legal and policy-related questions with issues of environmental planning.
