X-Texts on Culture and Society

X-TEXTS

The supposed 'end of history' turned out to be the end of certainty. Today we are dealing with the urgent questions posed by generations X, Y and Z. If we are to navigate a world in turmoil, we need insightful, reality-based guidance. That is what our X-TEXTS series sets out to provide: incisive analyses of society in our time, a forum for understanding and dissecting the trends, separating the wheat from the chaff. We believe that the issues at stake demand public debate beyond the ivory towers, and are pleased to be making these important contributions accessible to a wider audience.

Philipp Staab is professor of sociology of work, political economy and technological change at Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin and co-director of the Einstein Center Digital Future. In his research, he combines topics of work, social structure analysis, sociology of technology and political economy, working on the transformations of digital capitalism, ecological conflicts in late-modern societies, their changes in the context of war and the political crises that arise from all these contexts.
