

Contents

---

|                               |    |
|-------------------------------|----|
| Acknowledgements ..... | 11 |
|-------------------------------|----|

Introduction

|                                                                                                                                                         |    |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| Architectural drawing as investigating Device .....                                                                                                     | 13 |
| 0.1 The homogeneous addressee of modernism:perspective representation in the work of Ludwig Miesvan der Rohe and Le Corbusier .....             | 15 |
| 0.2 Postwar engaged users as activators of social change .....                                                                                          | 21 |
| 0.3 Architecture's addressees as decomposers and the primacyof the observer over the user .....                                                     | 22 |
| 0.4 The return to real space through the fragmented userin the post-autonomy era: Rem Koolhaas and Bernard Tschumi'sprogrammatic diagrams ..... | 24 |
| 0.5 From "property value" to "functional value" to "de-constructionvalue" to "new perception and experience value" .....                            | 26 |
| Notes .....                                                                                                                                             | 27 |

Chapter 1: Le Corbusier's act of drawing

|                                                                                                                  |    |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| The process of crystallization of design ideas .....                                                             | 31 |
| 1.1 Le Corbusier's conception of patient search: Drawing as pushing inside .....                                 | 35 |
| 1.2 The notion of transmissibility in Le Corbusier's thought .....                                               | 39 |
| 1.3 Around the capacity of architectural forms to provoke sensations .....                                       | 41 |
| 1.4 Le Corbusier vis-à-vis the postwar Italian Neo-Humanisticdiscourse: The debates around proportions ..... | 42 |
| 1.5 Human scale and universal needs: Towards a universal useror the Modulor .....                     | 44 |
| 1.6 Towards a conclusion: Architecture beyond the machine .....                                                  | 48 |
| Notes .....                                                                                                      | 50 |

Chapter 2: Le Corbusier's space beyond words

|                                                                                                                                               |    |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| From assemblages of components to succession of events .....                                                                                  | 59 |
| 2.1 The notion of assemblage in Le Corbusier's thought:Architecture as precise relationships.....                                         | 61 |
| 2.2 The "maison-outil" as clear syntax:Towards synchronism or the game of indisputable emotions .....                                     | 63 |
| 2.3 Le Corbusier's relationship with De Stijl: The interest in precision .....                                                                | 64 |
| 2.4 Le Corbusier's double attraction to the straight line or the rightangle and the spiral: Linking geometry to contemporary spirit ..... | 67 |
| 2.5 The notion of circulation in Le Corbusier's work:Eyes to feast on the walls or perspectives beyond walls .....                        | 70 |
| 2.6 Le Corbusier's conception of the metropolis: Tabula rasa urban theory? .....                                                              | 73 |
| 2.7 The "Open hand" as an expression of freedom? .....                                                                                        | 76 |
| 2.8 Towards a conclusion: From assemblages of componentsto succession of events .....                                                     | 79 |
| Notes .....                                                                                                                                   | 84 |

Chapter 3: Ludwig Mies van der Rohe's interior perspective views

|                                                                                                 |     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Around the specificities of his visual dispositifs .....                                        | 95  |
| 3.1 The viewer vis-à-vis the interior perspective views of Mies van der Rohe .....              | 98  |
| 3.2 The distinction between tactile and optical perceptionin Mies van der Rohe's work ..... | 103 |
| 3.3 Mies van der Rohe's Brick Country House .....                                               | 104 |
| 3.4 Mies van der Rohe vis-à-vis the assemblage of textual counters.....                         | 106 |
| 3.5 Between Mies van der Rohe and Hans Richter:Around the use of charcoal tonalities.....   | 107 |
| 3.6 Comparing Le Corbusier and Mies van der Rohe's dispositifs .....                     | 110 |
| 3.7 Towards a conclusion: Mies van der Rohe's representationsas symbolic montage .....      | 115 |
| Notes .....                                                                                     | 117 |

Chapter 4: Ludwig Mies van der Rohe's Baukunst as Zeitwille

|                                                                                                                        |     |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| The interest in impersonality and the autonomous individual .....                                                      | 123 |
| 4.1 Contextualizing Mies van der Rohe's conception of Zeitwille .....                                                  | 124 |
| 4.2 The ambiguity of Mies van der Rohe's simultaneous interestin impersonality and the autonomous individual ..... | 126 |
| 4.3 Baukunst as Zeitwille and the dualism between object and culture.....                                | 128 |

|     |                                                                                                                 |     |
|-----|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 4.4 | Mies van der Rohe's representations:Non-resolved emptiness as "negativeness" towards Großstadt ..... | 131 |
| 4.5 | Mies's Baukunst as an antidote to the chaos of metropolis .....                                          | 135 |
| 4.6 | Representational living and the capacity of space to stimulate the intellect ....                               | 137 |
| 4.7 | Teaching as an organic unfolding of spiritual and cultural relationships .....                                  | 138 |
|     | Notes .....                                                                                                     | 146 |

Chapter 5: The Team Ten and the humanization of architecture

|     |                                                                                                                          |     |
|-----|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
|     | Postwar engaged users as activators of change .....                                                                      | 155 |
| 5.1 | The Doorn manifesto as a fruit of generational conflict .....                                                            | 159 |
| 5.2 | The CIAM X and distrust in the concept of the "new" .....                                                                | 163 |
| 5.3 | After the Otterlo meeting: The "Post Box for the Developmentof the Habitat" as an agent of dynamic informality ..... | 166 |
| 5.4 | Alison and Peter Smithson's collages as reinventing established reality .....                                            | 168 |
| 5.5 | Aldo van Eyck's ethnographic concerns and the search for "the truly human" ..                                            | 173 |
|     | Notes .....                                                                                                              | 177 |

Chapter 6: Aldo Rossi's visual strategies and the prioritization of the observer

|     |                                                                                                                   |     |
|-----|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
|     | Urban facts as objects of affection .....                                                                         | 181 |
| 6.1 | Aldo Rossi's transatlantic exchanges and the proliferationof exhibitions on architectural drawings .....      | 185 |
| 6.2 | Aldo Rossi's representations as transforming architecturaland urban artefacts into objects of affection ..... | 192 |
| 6.3 | Aldo Rossi's understanding of the tension between individualand collective memory .....                       | 197 |
| 6.4 | Aldo Rossi's interest in the vitality of the dynamicof the expansion of the city .....                        | 198 |
| 6.5 | The import of the discourse around typology in the American scene .....                                           | 199 |
| 6.6 | Aldo Rossi's attitude toward typology and the urban factsof the American city .....                           | 202 |
|     | Notes .....                                                                                                       | 203 |

Chapter 7: Constantinos Doxiadis and Adriano Olivetti's role in reshaping the relationship between politics and urban planning .....

|     |                                                                                                                            |     |
|-----|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 7.1 | Constantinos A. Doxiadis and Adriano Olivetti and the formationof national identity in post-war Greece and Italy ..... | 213 |
| 7.2 | Adriano Olivetti's political agenda and the UNRRA-CASAS program .....                                                      | 214 |

|     |                                                                                                         |     |
|-----|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 7.3 | The Marshall Plan and the transatlantic exchangesin architecture, urban planning and the arts ..... | 217 |
| 7.4 | Constantinos A. Doxiadis's political agenda and The Planfor the Survival of the Greek Nation .....  | 219 |
| 7.5 | Towards a conclusion or juxtaposing centralizedand decentralized political apparatuses .....        | 225 |
|     | Notes .....                                                                                             | 227 |

Chapter 8: Giancarlo De Carlo's participatory design methods

|     |                                                                                                                                                       |     |
|-----|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
|     | Growth and flexibility in architectural organisms .....                                                                                               | 231 |
| 8.1 | From representation of designers to representation of users:Revisiting Giancarlo De Carlo's conception of participation .....                     | 234 |
| 8.2 | The Nuovo Villaggio Matteotti in Terni and the concept of participation .....                                                                         | 236 |
| 8.3 | Giancarlo De Carlo and the humanization of architecture:The real transformation of the world .....                                                | 244 |
| 8.4 | Giancarlo De Carlo and architectural pedagogy .....                                                                                                   | 248 |
| 8.5 | Giancarlo De Carlo as exhibition curator .....                                                                                                        | 249 |
| 8.6 | Around the presence of human figures in the photographsand drawings of Giancarlo De Carlo's buildings .....                                       | 250 |
| 8.7 | Towards a conclusion or problematizing participation:From "participation" to "co-production" to "negotiated planning"to "crossbenching" ..... | 257 |
|     | Notes .....                                                                                                                                           | 258 |

Chapter 9: Denise Scott Brown and the socio-anthropological meaning as new objectivity

|     |                                                                                                          |     |
|-----|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
|     | Challenging functionalism through social patterns .....                                                  | 265 |
| 9.1 | Denise Scott Brown at the 1956 CIAM Summer Schooland the significance of planning .....              | 267 |
| 9.2 | Advocacy planning movement and the critiques of urban renewal .....                                      | 270 |
| 9.3 | The impact of Herbert Gans's socio-anthropological perspectiveon Denise Scott Brown's approach ..... | 271 |
| 9.4 | Learning from Levittown Studio:Towards a socio-anthropological perspective .....                     | 273 |
| 9.5 | South Street in Philadelphia and a careful regard for peopleand existing architecture .....          | 284 |
| 9.6 | The patterns of mapped data as signs of life .....                                                       | 285 |

|                                                                                      |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 9.7 Towards a conclusion: Looking sociology froman architectural viewpoint ..... | 293 |
| Notes .....                                                                          | 299 |

Chapter 10: Bernard Tschumi's politics of space

|                                                                                                 |     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Architecture as instrument of socio-cultural change .....                                       | 307 |
| 10.1 Bernard Tschumi and May '68: Social concerns and teaching strategies .....                 | 310 |
| 10.2 Diploma Unit 10 and the integration of space into pedagogy:Notation and events .....   | 314 |
| 10.3 The Insurgent Space Catalogue .....                                                        | 317 |
| 10.4 Questioning architecture's function as an instrumentof socio-cultural change .....     | 318 |
| 10.5 Bernard Tschumi and the politics of space .....                                            | 320 |
| 10.6 A Space: A Thousand Words .....                                                            | 321 |
| 10.7 The Manhattan Transcripts and the disjunction of the Metropolis .....                      | 328 |
| 10.8 Conclusion: Around the relevance of Bernard Tschumi's thoughtfor current debates ..... | 336 |
| Notes .....                                                                                     | 343 |

