First, I aim to express my deep gratitude to Prof. Dr. Ophelia Deroy, my trusted main supervisor, for her substantial and patient support and advice. Ophelia Deroy ignited in me the motivation and confidence to put my own theory into the focus and dig deeper into its wide implications for the qualia problem, but also for the philosophy of mind as such. Your ongoing fruitful advice and constructive critique was priceless; without it, this work would be very different, and not for the better.

My warm thanks go out to Prof. Dr. Stephan Sellmaier, my second supervisor who is – among many other aspects of neurological and consciousness affairs – an avid expert regarding David Chalmers' "hard problem". Our discussions greatly helped to shape and refine my work. Much gratitude for your generous support!

Much appreciation must be expressed to Prof. Dr. em. Wilhelm Vossenkuhl, who trusted my abilities enough to introduce me to Ophelia Deroy and supported my project throughout the entire process. Your help will never be forgotten.

Prof. Dr. em. Lutz Ellrich, the supervisor of my first dissertation, has been as supportive as ever since I first told him about my ambitions of a second dissertation. Every time we discussed my ideas something inspiring happened. Many thanks, dear Lutz!

Very special thanks to my beloved mother who taught me critical thinking and believed in me even when I didn't. I literally owe you my life, in all ways thinkable. Much gratitude to my father, who sharpened my ambitions by questioning me and helped to shape me into the person I am now.

Finally, I owe much gratitude and respect to a very special person in my life. Sonja Helena Bauer supported me in hard times, always believed in me and never settled for easy solutions that didn't fully convince her. Thank you for diving deep into the implications of the conversion theory and sharing your critical perspectives.
