

Contents

Acknowledgement	9
Introduction: ‘The Outsider Within’—Intersection of Self-Reflexivity and Critical Research	11
Background of the Study: A Critique of Black Diasporic Thought —Paul Gilroy and Michelle M. Wright in Conversation	19
1. Phenomenology of Power: Black Feminism and Adjacent Theories	31
1.1 Bodies that do not matter	34
1.2 Butler, Psychoanalytic Theory, and the Becoming of the Black Female Subject	47
1.3 Misogynoir: The Paradox of Black Women’s Invisibility and Hypervisibility	52
1.4 The Racial Dynamics of Black Women’s Femicide	56
2. Literary Interview as a Dialogic Form of ‘Outsider Within’ Portrait	63
3. Mobilizing History and Social Positionalities	81
3.1 Who am I?: Subjectivity, (Dis)Continuity, and Subjection	82
3.2 Transgenerational Black Trauma: Stoicism, Dissociation, Unresolvable Contradictions, and the Legacies of Historical Transatlantic Misogynoir	99
3.3 Black Women, Visible Histories, and Gendered Trajectories	116
4. Misogynoir and the Construction of Difference	159
4.1 White Gaze and the Undesirability of Black Hair	160
4.2 Intersection of Anti-Black Misogyny and Fatphobia	172
4.3 Intersectionality in the Domestic Kitchen Space	177

5. Postcolonial Continuities: Black Women's Positionality in the Global Economy	191
5.1 Permissible Humiliations and Anti-Black Violence: Immigration, Citizenship, and Humanitarian Crisis	192
Conclusion	251
Bibliography	263