Above all, I would like to thank my supervisors, Frank Kelleter, Katja Kanzler, and Florian Sedlmeier, for their guidance and support: for reading several drafts of my dissertation, listening to countless colloquium presentations of my project, and giving me invaluable feedback on my thoughts and arguments.

I am very grateful for the assistance of David Bosold and Gabi Bodmeier at the Graduate School of North American Studies—from the very first days in the basement all the way to my doctoral defense, I always knew where to turn if had questions or needed help.

I wish to thank Professor William A. Gleason for extending an invitation to spend a semester at Princeton University and experience elite education firsthand, and the staff at the Seeley G. Mudd Manuscript Library for their help in navigating the Princeton archives.

My time at the Kennedy Institute would not have been the same without the amazing, smart, and funny people I met there, and I want to thank all of you for keeping me happy and sane(-ish) during those years of strenuous dissertating: Dustin Breitenwischer, Felix Brinker, Mathias Großklaus, Rieke Jordan, Curd Knüpfer, Christian Lammert, Martin Lüthe, Koen Potgieter, Alexander Starre, Maria Sulimma, Boris Vormann, Birte Wege, Mieke Woelky.

My deepest thanks go to Katharina Metz and Talel Ben Jemia—you are my favorite people in the world and neither my dissertation nor I myself would be any good without you.

Finally, I want to thank Philipp Jung and my parents, Charlotte Spieler and Karl-Heinz Sternberg, for everything and more.
