Wow! What a ride! This is it: this is the thesis. (And now the book.) Aw ni ce, Bamakomogow! Thanks for your time, thoughts and company. Thanks to my supervisors Elisio Macamo and Richard Rottenburg for being an inspiration – both to this thesis and to me as a scholar in the making. I am grateful for your thoughts, comments and your support. Thanks to the Centre for African Studies in Basel and all the people who make it such an awesome place to do a PhD. Thanks to Veit Arlt, in particular, for making things happen. Thanks to the project team “Construire son Avenir” and its members Michele Engeler, Manfred Perlik and Noemi Steuer. Thanks to my dear colleague Maike Birzle. To all my colleagues and friends at the Centre for African Studies in Basel: High five! Thanks for your thoughts and critical comments that have helped shape this thesis: Carole Ammann, Stephanie Bishop, Lydia Linke, James Merron, Joschka Philipps, Haddy Sarr and Susanne Schultz. Special thanks to Julia Büchele and Bognan Valentin Koné for your continuous support. Go team! (Thanks to all the members of the African Studies Institute at the University of Leipzig for your support, your ideas and thanks for the inspiration, the discussions and the companionship.) I am thankful for the financial contributions made by the Schweizerische Nationalfonds (SNF) as well as to Freiwillige Akademische Gesellschaft (FAG), the Travel Fund of the University of Basel and the Graduate School of Social Sciences (G3S). Thanks to Grace Tran for language suggestions, to Alassane Keita for interview transcriptions. (Thank you, Matthias Müller, for editing this book with so much care and patience.) (Thanks to the publishing team at transcript and thanks again to the SNF for funding the publication of this book.)

Thanks to la famille à Faladie. Thank you, Mama. And to Flo (and Tilda): Love! Thank you!

Basel, November 2017 (and Leipzig, 2023.)
