First of all, I would like to thank the members of Van Gogh TV for their support: Without Benjamin Heidersberger this research project would not have happened at all. He as well as Mike Hentz, Karel Dudesek and Salvatore Vannasco always made themselves available for questions and generously provided me with material from their private archives.

My colleagues Jens Schroeter and Christoph Ernst from the University of Bonn were great research partners in our research projec. We have to thank Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft (DFG) for their generous financial support. Thanks also go to my colleagues from the Institut für Mediengestaltung (IMG) at Hochschule Mainz: Anja Stöffler, Hartmut Jahn, Olaf Hirschberg and Paulo Ferreira-Lopes, who supported me during the application process, as well as Sabine Hartel-Schenk from our research department, who was of great help when we wrote the funding application.

A very special “Thank you” goes to my Mainz project collaborators: student assistant Lisa Langemann, who, while watching countless hours of video material, discovered the Piazza virtuale fan club, Frithjof Heinrich for excellent camera work, and my research associate Julian Weinert, who I could rely on for more than three years in a variety of functions – author of essays as well as cameraman, web designer as well as conference host – who always supported me in this huge project and who never lost his sense of humour.

I also need to thank everyone who we interviewed for this project: Nicolas Baginsky, Wolfgang Bergmann, Michael Bielický, Jacques Bigot, Kathrin Brinkmann, Klaus Peter Dencker, Lothar Fritsch, Ulrike Gabriel, Ronald Gonko, Hermann Josef Hack, Kathy Rae Huffman, Thomas Kaulmann, Christiane Klappert, Marko Košnik, Geert Lovink, Kirill Preobraschenski, Stefan Römer, Baiba Ripa, Janine Sack, Holger Schulze, Pit Schultz, Cornelia Sollfrank, Gerfried Stocker, Rosa von Sues, Manuel Tessloff, Peter Weibel, Hans Wermelinger and Christian Wolff.

Finally I'd like to thank Christina Radner and Michaela Wimplinger (Ars Electronica), Brigitta Coers und Alexander Zeisberg (documenta Archiv), Peter Farkas, Nils Loof, Nora Sternfeld, Alfred Rother, Wulf Herzogenrath, Wolfgang Ernst and Hannah Glauner.
