

X-RAY

Corporeal Matters

is a publication series on arts-based research, in particular practices and concepts that place the body at the core. It illuminates how the body appears simultaneously as witness, document, and agent in contemporary life, and offers insights into corporeality as the often-neglected dimension that cuts through ethics, aesthetics, and politics. From multiple perspectives and fields of application and grounded in moments of research, encounter and debate generated in the context of the Inter-University Centre for Dance Berlin (HZT), the series hosts edited volumes, authored publications, workbooks and other formats.
