

Religion and Ecological Crisis

Responses from Asia

Edited by

METTE HALSKOV HANSEN

and

KENNETH BO NIELSEN

LEIDEN
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Religion and Ecological Crisis

RELIGION AND ECOLOGICAL CRISIS

Responses from Asia

Edited by

Mette Halskov Hansen and Kenneth Bo Nielsen

LEIDEN UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cover design: Andre Klijsen

Cover illustration: Buddha's head embraced by the roots of the bodhi tree (Ficus religiosa), Wat Mahathat, Ayutthaya, Thailand (Photo by Amita Baviskar).

Lay-out: Crius Group, Hulshout

Printer: Scanlaser bv, Zaandam

Every effort has been made to obtain permission to use all copyrighted illustrations reproduced in this book. Nonetheless, whosoever believes to have rights to this material is advised to contact the publisher.

ISBN 9789087285081

e-ISBN 9789400605725 (e-PDF)

e-ISBN 9789400605732 (e-PUB)

<https://doi.org/10.24415/9789400605732>

NUR 744

© 2026, Mette Halskov Hansen & Kenneth Bo Nielsen / Leiden University Press, Rapenburg 73, 2311 GJ Leiden

All rights reserved. Without limiting the rights under copyright reserved above, no part of this book may be reproduced, stored in or introduced into a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means (electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise) without the written permission of both the publisher and the editors of the book.

Creative Commons Licence CC BY-NC-ND (<https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-nd/4.0/deed>)

Contact EU General Product Safety Regulation (GPSR): productsafety@lup.nl

Table of Contents

Acknowledgments	7
About the Authors	9
Introduction. Religion and Ecological Crisis: Responses from Asia Mette Halskov Hansen and Kenneth Bo Nielsen	11
Chapter 1. Enlisting the Divine Farmer, Shennong: Spirituality, Science, and Environmentalism in Taiwan Koen Wellens and Mette Halskov Hansen	29
Chapter 2. Yogic Ecology? Spirituality, Science, and Pseudoscience in Indian Agroecological Movements for Soil Health Daniel Münster	51
Chapter 3. Ecopractices, Self-Realization, and Interpretations of Tradition in a Chinese Ecovillage Wengkang Qian, Zhaohui Liu, and Rune Svarverud	73
Chapter 4. Hòa Hảo Buddhism and the Target of Net-Zero Plastic Waste in the Mekong Delta Nhung Lu Rots	93
Chapter 5. Pragmatic Environmentalism: Sikhism and Grassroots Environmental Advocacy in North India Aase Jeanette Kvanneid	113
Chapter 6. “Purity at the Source”: Tzu Chi’s Organizational and Communal Storytelling about Recycling and Vegetarianism Hongtao Li and Lu Chen	135
Chapter 7. Agroecology as Christian Environmentalism in a Hindu Majoritarian Context Kenneth Bo Nielsen and Nihar Gokhale	155

Chapter 8. The Purest Food: Cowmilk, Transcendent Claims, and Ecological Sustainability in India Amita Baviskar	177
Chapter 9. Ecologies of Gods and States: Theogenic Soils and Forests in the Blang Mountains, China Daniel Mohseni Kabir Bäckström	201
Afterword. The Jury Is Still Out Robert P. Weller	223
Index	229

Acknowledgments

This book is the outcome of a long-term research collaboration undertaken as part of the project “Transcendence and Sustainability: Asian Visions with Global Promise.” We are grateful to the Norwegian Research Council for funding the project, and to the Department of Culture, Religion, Asian and Middle Eastern Studies at the University of Oslo for hosting it.

We would like to thank Leiden University Press for their dedicated work on the book, and especially Saskia Gieling for so efficiently and positively taking on the project with short notice. Thanks also to Lisa van Vliet for her constructive and firm guidance throughout the publication process. A warm thanks is also due to the International Institute for Asian Studies—and especially Mary Lynn van Dijk and Tak-Wing Ngo—for the time and effort invested in the book in an earlier phase. Two anonymous reviewers supplied us with such constructive and positive feedback, and we are thankful for their encouraging words. Last, but not least, we are very grateful to Colleen Berry for her rigorous and professional copyediting of the manuscript, and to Robert P. Weller for accepting our invitation to write the afterword.

About the Authors

Daniel Mohseni Kabir Bäckström has a PhD in China Studies from the University of Oslo, where he is currently a visiting scholar. His research focuses on the confluence of religion, politics, and ethnic minorities; upland Buddhism; and theories of religion in China.

Amita Baviskar is Professor of Environmental Studies and Sociology and Anthropology at Ashoka University, India. Her research is focused on the cultural politics of environment and development in rural and urban India.

Lu Chen holds a PhD in China Studies from the University of Oslo. Her doctoral research focuses on local responses to environmental and climate challenges with case studies in eastern China. She is currently affiliated with Zhejiang Yuexiu University in Shaoxing, China.

Nihar Gokhale is a doctoral student in international development at the Oxford Department of International Development, University of Oxford. He holds an M. Sc. in Economics from the TERI School of Advanced Studies, Delhi, and has worked as an independent journalist, editor and researcher.

Mette Halskov Hansen is Professor of China Studies at the University of Oslo. She has done anthropological research in China since the late 1980s, especially on education, ethnic relations, migration, and the environment.

Aase J. Kvanneid has a PhD in Social Anthropology and specializes in climate and environmental anthropology. Her research since 2011 has focused on cultural responses to environmental change, with extensive fieldwork in rural northern India, published in a monograph by Routledge.

Hongtao Li has a PhD in Communication from the City University of Hong Kong and is a professor in the School of Journalism at Fudan University in China. His research interests include media sociology, environmental communication, and cultural memory.

Zhaohui Liu is a professor at the Institute of Anthropology at Zhejiang University, China. His research fields are mainly linked to environmental humanities, rural community development and resettlement, and cultural heritage.

Daniel Münster is Associate Professor of Medical Anthropology at the University of Oslo. His research is located at the intersection of health and the environment with a focus on agrarian communities in South India.

Kenneth Bo Nielsen is Associate Professor of Social Anthropology at the University of Oslo where he also heads the Centre for South Asian Democracy.

Wengkang Qian is a doctoral fellow at Zhejiang University, China. His research interests are environmental humanities and cultural heritage.

Nhung Lu Rots has a PhD from the Faculty of Humanities at the University of Oslo, based on a study of engaged Buddhism and environmentalism in present-day Vietnam. She was awarded the Environmental Humanities 2024 Best Article Prize for her co-authored article “When Gods Drown in Plastic: Vietnamese Whale Worship, Environmental Crises, and the Problem of Animism.”

Rune Svarverud is Professor of China Studies at the University of Oslo. His main research interests are China’s intellectual history, East-West cultural contacts, and environmental history.

Koen Wellens is Professor of China Studies at the University of Oslo. His research is focused on religious practice, state-religion relationships and ethnic minority issues in contemporary China and Taiwan.

Robert P. Weller is Professor of Anthropology at Boston University. His most recent books are How Things Count as the Same (with Adam Seligman), and Religion and Charity (with C. Julia Huang and Keping Wu). His work on the environment includes Discovering Nature: Globalization and Environmental Culture in China and Taiwan.