

Contents

1. Introduction	7
2. Immigration and Sexuality: Policies and Practices in Switzerland	21
2.1 Migration to Switzerland	22
2.2 Lesbians in Switzerland	37
2.3 Queer Migration to Switzerland	46
3. Sexuality, Migration, Space	61
3.1 Embodied Geographies	62
3.2 Traveling Concepts of Sexualities: Queer Migration Studies	72
3.3 What's Space Got to Do with It? Geographies of Sexualities	77
3.4 Thinking Sexuality, Migration, and Space Together	88
3.5 Who Are 'Queer Migrant Women'? Approaching the Research Subject	118
4. Methodology: Doing Research in an Intersectional Field	129
4.1 Applied Methods	129
4.2 The Sampling Process	142
4.3 Data Corpus, Data Analysis, and Writing Process	144
4.4 Some Thoughts on Positionality	149
5. Shifting Positions of the Sexual Self	155
5.1 "Now I can say I'm a lesbian": Becoming a Lesbian in Switzerland	156
5.2 "I was totally shocked": Differing Sexual (Sub)cultures	175
5.3 "It's like a stamp": Rejecting the Lesbian Label	192
5.4 Conclusion	208
6. Family Matters	211
6.1 Family Relations: The Family of Origin	213
6.2 Queer Families	252
6.3 Conclusion	275

7. Diasporic Spaces, Intersectional Homing Desires	279
7.1 Negotiating Racism and Xenophobia as an 'Ausländerin' in Switzerland	280
7.2 Ambivalent Diasporic Spaces	284
7.3 Queering the Diasporic, Diasporizing the Lesbian	296
7.4 Desiring the Queer Compatriot	297
7.5 "Des Suisses-Suisses on va laisser tomber": Being 'Other Swiss' Together	300
7.6 Imagining and Reclaiming the (Parents') Home Country	303
7.7 Conclusion	306
8. Sexual Citizenship	309
8.1 Partnership Registration: An Intimate Decision?	310
8.2 Producing and Controlling Sexualities at and within the Border	319
8.3 Conclusion	334
9. Work	337
9.1 Work as a Site of Recognition, Self-Realization, and Integration	338
9.2 Failing to Connect at Work	341
9.3 "Romeo and Juliet would have killed each other long ago": Being Excluded from Work	346
9.4 'Coming out' at Work	350
9.5 "I'll just get the degree and then they'll leave me alone": Work as a 'Trade-off' in Intra-familial Negotiations	355
10. Scales of Identification: The City, the Rural	359
10.1 Living in the Swiss Countryside: Ambivalent Rural Closets	361
10.2 Grabbing the Bull by its Horns: The Rural as the Epitome of Switzerland	364
10.3 Rural Utopias	369
10.4 Conclusion	370
11. Conclusion and Outlook	373
Acknowledgments	393
Résumé	395
Bibliography	401
Annex I: List of Research Participants	437
Annex II: Overview of Collected Data	441
Annex III: Technical Notes	443