

About the Authors

Mona Baie, MD, MA, is a research associate at the Chair of Medical Humanities at the University of Fribourg, Switzerland. Her research focuses on clinical spaces in German- and English-language literature of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries, disability in European literature and culture, the prospects and challenges of medical humanities as a field, and medical didactics. Recent publications include »Liegend kämpfen: Der Heilort ›Krankenhaus‹ und die Poetik der Affekte in Audre Lordes The Cancer Journals«, in: Alina Boy (ed.): Heilorte: Topiken und Topografien von Krankheit und Heilung in der Literatur, Baden-Baden 2025, pp. 163–186; and »What’s in a Name? GTE and Medical Humanities in Germany«, in: The Polyphony, 28 November 2024, <https://thepolyphony.org/2024/11/28/gte-german-medical-humanities/> (accessed 1 February 2026).

Jenny Bergenmar is Professor of Comparative Literature at the University of Gothenburg. Her research focuses on neurodivergence in relation to literature and life writing, queer theory, bibliography, and practices of reading. Her recent publications include Critical Neurodiversity Studies: Divergent Textualities in Literature and Culture, London 2025, co-edited with Louise Creechan and Anna Stenning, in which she also contributed the chapter »Humorous Failures: Neurodivergence in Scandinavian Young Adult Fiction«. She is also co-editor of the 2025 special issue on neurodiversity of Kultur og Klasse. Earlier work includes an exploration of vulnerability as a critical concept for rethinking disability in contemporary Nordic literature (Cham 2020).

Klaus Birnstiel is substitute Professor of German Literature with an emphasis on Cultural Theory at Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität Munich. His research focuses on literature and critique in the Enlightenment, on Romanticism and on poststructuralist theory. He directs the research network »Inclusive Philology: Literary Disability Studies in the German-Speaking Realm«. He earned his Ph.D. with a book on the history of ›French Theory‹ in Literary Studies. Within Literary Disability Studies, he is writing on E.T.A. Hoffmann, Adalbert Stifter, Thomas Mann and others.

Dr Harriet Cooper is a Lecturer in Medical Education (Sociology and Humanities) at the University of East Anglia in Norwich, UK. Her research has focussed on the figure of the disabled child in contemporary Anglo-American literature and culture, as well as on shame and stigma in healthcare experience. Harriet's most recent publication is an article featuring in a 2025 special issue of Literature and Medicine, entitled »Shame, Enchantment and the ›There-ness‹ of Disability in The Secret Garden«.

Evelyn Dueck (<https://orcid.org/0000-0002-3447-4699>) is Professor of German and Comparative Literature at the University of Geneva. Her research focuses on literature and science in the long 18th century, literary translation and contemporary German poetry. Recent publications include: Die »krumme Bahn der Sinnlichkeit« – Sehen und Wahrnehmen in Optik, Naturforschung und Ästhetik des 17. und 18. Jahrhunderts, Paderborn 2022; »alle unser Wissen muß praktisch seyn«. Meiers Sittenlehre und ihre Grundlegung in einer Theorie des sinnlichen Menschen. In: Berndt, Frauke et al. (eds.), Ethische Praktiken in ästhetischen Theorien des 18. Jahrhunderts, Hamburg 2024, pp. 47–61.

David Feeney is an independent researcher. His research focuses on disability representation and cultural inclusion. Publications include »Bringing a Brick to Market: Pedagogical Perspectives on the Discordant Interplay between Critical and Cultural Stations of Blindness« in Bolt, David (ed.): Finding Blindness: International Constructions and Deconstructions, London 2023, pp. 151–166; »Art, Visual Impairment, and the Gatekeepers of Aesthetic Value«, in: Ravenscroft, John (ed.): The Routledge Handbook of Visual Impairment, London 2019, pp. 255–274; and »A Modest Defence of Disability Simulation within an Arts Access Context«, in: MuseumEdu 5 (2017), pp. 83–106.

Johannes Görbert is a postdoctoral researcher and Habilitation candidate at the Chair of Medical Humanities, University of Fribourg, Switzerland, where he coordinates the Disability Studies research and teaching area and co-directs the DFG research network »Inclusive Philology: Literary Disability Studies in the German-Speaking Realm«. His current research project, Fragile Moderne, examines literary representations of disability in Weimar Republic literature. He received his doctorate from Freie Universität Berlin (2013) with a dissertation on the travel writings of Georg Forster, Alexander von Humboldt, and Adelbert von Chamisso. His research interests include disability studies, travel literature, lyric poetry, and autobiographical writing. Publications: <https://orcid.org/0000-0003-0656-4950>.

Martina King is Professor of Medical Humanities at University of Fribourg. Her research focuses on literature and medicine, the cultural history of epidemics, literary space studies and, most recently, on the history and epistemology of the medical discharge report. Recent publications include Narra- tive Structure and Narrative Knowing in Medicine and Science (ed. with Tom Kindt), Berlin 2023; »Infektiologische Diagnosen, blutende Körper: Ernst Weiß und die pathophile Moderne«, in: Huber, Till/Kyora, Sabine (eds.): Figuren der Diagnostik, Berlin 2025, pp. 75–103; »Heil und Verderben. Zur Literatur- und Kulturgeschichte des Impfens im frühen 19. Jahrhundert«, in: KulturPoetik 2021/2, pp. 176–209.

Dr Linda Leskau is a teacher for special requirements at the Institute for Diversity Studies at TU Dortmund University (<https://div.kuwi.tu-dortmund.de/leskau>). Her research focuses on German literature from the eighteenth century to the present, literary disability studies, gender and queer studies, and theories of literature and culture. Recent publications include: Leskau, Linda/Nusser, Tanja/Sorrels, Katherine (eds.): Disability in German-Speaking Europe. History, Memory, and Culture, Rochester 2022; Leskau, Linda/Nieberle, Sigrid (eds.): Wiedersehen mit Heidi. Polyperspektivische Lektüren der Heidi-Romane von Johanna Spyri, Bielefeld 2023; »Der Außerordentliche ist immer verkrüppelt«. Zur Resignifikation des Krüppels. In: Höfer, Hanna/Nieberle, Sigrid (eds.): Kulturwissenschaftliche Diversity Studies: Studien zwischen Theorie und Empirie, Bielefeld 2026 (in print).

Stuart Murray is Professor of Contemporary Literatures and Film at the University of Leeds in the UK. His research focuses on technologized embodiment in disability and health. Recent publications include his editing of »Imagining Technologies for Disability Futures«, a special issue of BMJ: Medical Humanities (Vol. 50, Issue 4, 2024).

Swaantje Otto is a research fellow at the Thesaurus linguae Latinae at the Bavarian Academy of Sciences in Munich and a PhD student at the Université de Fribourg and Eberhard Karls University Tübingen (Cotutelle de thèse). Her research focuses on comparative literature, the reception of ancient literature and literary pedagogy. Recent publications include articles on Thomas Mann's reception of classical texts as well as on propaganda literature in Lower German during the Second World War.

Tom Shakespeare (CBE, FBA) is Professor of Disability Research at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, where he co-directs the International Centre for Evidence in Disability. He previously worked as a technical officer at the World Health Organisation, where he co-authored the World Report on Disability (2011). His books include The Sexual Politics of Disability (1996), Disability Rights and Wrongs (2006; revised edition 2014), and Disability: The Basics (2017).

