

Contents

Acknowledgements	7
I Introduction	9
1. Points of Departure: Tracing Roots/Routes to Africa	9
2. On the Current State of Research	15
3. Route Map: Theoretical Premises, Methods, and Objectives of this Study	25
II Traveling Black—Traveling Back	31
1. Black Im/Mobilities Past and Present	33
2. Diasporic Return and the Significance of Africa in the Black Imagination	48
III An Invisible/Kaleidoscopic Genre: Black Travel Writing	63
1. Defining the Terms: Genre and Genealogy	65
2. The Transnational Slave Narrative and the Roots of Black Travel Writing.....	76
3. Developments and Trajectories	91
3.1 Travel Writing as a Venue for Criticism	92
3.2 “What a Difference a Border Makes”: Transformative Travel Experiences and Literary Self-Exploration	99
3.3 Twentieth-Century Black Writers in/on Africa	106
IV Contemporary Black Travel Narratives	115
1. (Re)Writing Roots	117
1.1 Barack Obama’s Dreams from My Father: A Story of Race and Inheritance (1995)	118
1.2 Isaiah Washington’s A Man from Another Land: How Finding My Roots Changed My Life (2011)	132

2.	Disenchanting Africa	144
2.1	Eddy L. Harris's Native Stranger: A Black American's Journey into the Heart of Africa (1992).....	146
2.2	Keith Richburg's Out of America: A Black Man Confronts Africa (1997)	162
3.	Searching for Home	180
3.1	Ekow Eshun's Black Gold of the Sun: Searching for Home in Africa and Beyond (2005)	182
3.2	Emily Raboteau's Searching for Zion: The Quest for Home in the African Diaspora (2013)	198
4.	Tracing Routes	213
4.1	Caryl Phillips's The Atlantic Sound (2000).....	214
4.2	Saidiya Hartman's Lose Your Mother: A Journey Along the Atlantic Slave Route (2007)	230
V	Conclusion: Ambiguous Arrivals	249
	Bibliography	255
	Primary Sources	255
	Secondary Sources	256