

Authors

Jasper Aalbers, MA

*1984, PhD candidate in the Department of Technology and Society Studies, Maastricht University. His PhD project focuses on the staging and representation of urban soundscapes in fiction film between 1930 and 2000. He is a contributor to the research project Soundscapes of the Urban Past: Staged Sound as Mediated Cultural Heritage (funded by the Netherlands Organization for Scientific Research NWO). He published on the connections between film theory and technology in TMG (Dutch Journal for Media History). Homepage: <http://www.unimaas.nl/staff/aalbers>

Prof. Dr. Karin Bijsterveld

*1961, Professor in the Department of Technology and Society Studies, Maastricht University. She coordinates several research projects at the crossroads of Science and Technology Studies and Sound Studies (funded by the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research NWO). One of these projects is Sonic Skills: Sound and Listening in Science, Technology and Medicine, 1920s-now. She is co-editor (with Trevor Pinch) of the Oxford Handbook of Sound Studies (2012) and a member of the research network Sound in Media Culture (funded by the German Research Foundation DFG). Selected publications: Mechanical Sound. Technology, Culture, and Public Problems of Noise in the Twentieth Century, The MIT Press, Cambridge MA, 2008; Sound Souvenirs. Audio Technologies, Memory and Cultural Practices, Amsterdam University Press, 2009 (co-ed. with José van Dijk).

Homepage: <http://www.unimaas.nl/staff/bijsterveld>

Dr. Carolyn Birdsall

*1980, Assistant professor in the Department of Media Studies, University of Amsterdam. Her research interests are in the fields of media and cultural history, with a particular focus on radio, film and television sound, documentary and urban studies. Her monograph Nazi Soundscapes (2012) examines the significance of radio and sound systems in urban environments during Weimar and National Socialist Germany. Selected publications: Sonic Mediations. Body, Sound, Technology. Cambridge Scholars Press, 2008 (with Anthony Enns); Earwitnessing. Sound Memories of the Nazi Period, in: Karin Bijsterveld and José van Dijck (eds.), Sound Souvenirs. Audio Technologies, Memory and Cultural Practices, Amsterdam University Press, 2009.

Homepage: <http://home.medewerker.uva.nl/c.j.birdsall/>

Prof. Ross Brown

*1963, Dean of Studies and professor at the Central School of Speech and Drama, University of London. He was trained as a fine artist and worked as professional composer, musician, technician, sound designer and writer before joining the academy in 1994. He has played a leading role internationally in establishing sound as a core dramaturgical and scenographic consideration of theatre, as well as a specialist technical art. His research develops discursive frameworks for practice-as-research and theories of theatre sound, noise and aurality that bridge the fields of drama, theatre, sound studies and sonic arts practices. Selected publications: Towards Theatre Noise, in: Lynne Kendrick and David Roesner (eds.), Theatre Noise. The Sound of Performance. Cambridge Scholars, 2012; Sound Design: the Scenography of Engagement and Distraction in: Jane Collins and Andrew Nisbett (eds.), Theatre and Performance Design: a Reader in Scenography, Routledge, London, 2010; Sound. Palgrave Readings in Theatre Practice series, Palgrave Macmillan, Basingstoke, 2009.

Homepage: <http://www.cssd.ac.uk/staff/profiles/prof-ross-brown-ba-frsa-fhea>

Prof. Dr. Andrew Crisell

*1943, Professor of Broadcasting Studies in the School of Arts, Design and Media, University of Sunderland, United Kingdom. He is Chair of the school's Media Postgraduate Research Group and a member of the editorial boards of the Radio Journal and the Journal of Media Business Studies. Selected publications: A Study of Modern Television. Thinking Inside the Box, Palgrave Macmillan, Basingstoke, 2006; Radio. Critical Concepts in Media and Cultural Studies, (ed.) Routledge, London, 2009; Liveness and Recording in the Media, Palgrave Macmillan, Basingstoke, 2012.

Homepage: <http://www.crmcs.sunderland.ac.uk/research-staff/andrew-crisell/>

Dr. Andreas Fickers

*1971, Associate professor of comparative media history in the Department of Arts and Culture, Maastricht University. His work focuses on the cultural history of communication technologies and European media history in transnational perspective. With Sonja de Leeuw (Utrecht University) he coordinates the European Television History Network, and he is one of the editors in chief of the Journal of European Television History and Culture. Selected publications: A European Television History (with Jonathan Bignell), Wiley-Blackwell, Hoboken NJ, 2008; Materializing Europe. Transnational Infrastructures and the Project of Europe (with Alexander Badenoch), Palgrave-Macmillan, Basingstoke, 2010; Transnational Television History (with Catherine Johnson), Routledge, London, 2012.

Homepage: <http://www.unimaas.nl/staff/fickers>

Drs. Ir. Annelies Jacobs

*1955, PhD-candidate in the Department of Technology and Society Studies, Maastricht University. Her PhD-research focuses on the staging of Amsterdam soundscapes in historical text, which is one of the subprojects in Soundscapes of the Urban Past (a project funded by the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research NWO). She has published on the sound of war in Amsterdam in Stadsgeschiedenis (a Dutch journal for urban history, 2012), and on sound as an unheard(of) dimension in architecture in Mosaïk (a Dutch interdisciplinary journal for cultural studies, 2005). Other publications: Storing Sound Souvenirs. The Multi-Sited Domestication of the Tape Recorder (with Karin Bijsterveld), in Bijsterveld, Karin/van Dijck, José (eds.) (2009): Sound Souvenirs. Audio Technologies, Memory and Cultural Practices, Amsterdam.

Homepage: <http://www.fdcw.unimaas.nl/staff/jacobs>

Evi Karathanasopoulou

*1980, PhD candidate at the University of Sunderland, United Kingdom. Her area of research is Radio Studies with a focus on aesthetics, radio art and the radio voice. She has earned a BA (First Class Hons) in Media Production (Television and Radio) from the University of Sunderland and an MA in Radio from Goldsmiths College, University of London. In February 2008 she received an Award for excellence for the best Short-form Radio Report from the Broadcast Journalism Training Council (BJTC) in the United Kingdom. She co-authored Teaching Sustainable Media Practice (with Alex Lockwood and Caroline Mitchell), in: Kristen Allen Bartels and Kelly A. Parker (eds.), Teaching Sustainability, Stylus, Sterling VA, 2012.

Homepage: <http://www.crmcs.sunderland.ac.uk/postgrad-research/current-postgrad/evi-karathansopoulou/>

Prof. Dr. Patricia Pisters

*1965, Professor of media culture and film studies, and chair of the Department of Media Studies, University of Amsterdam. She has published on film-philosophical questions of audio-visually mediated perception, the ontology of the image, the politics of contemporary screen culture, transnational media, and the idea of the brain as screen in connection to neuroscience. Selected publications: The Matrix of Visual Culture. Working with Deleuze in Film Theory, Stanford University Press, 2003; Shooting the Family.

Transnational Media and Intercultural Values (co-ed. with Wim Staat), Amsterdam University Press, 2005; Mind the Screen (co-ed. with Jaap Kooijman and Wanda Strauven), Amsterdam University Press, 2008; The Neuro-Image. A Deleuzian Film-Philosophy of Digital Screen Culture, Stanford University Press, 2012.

See also www.patriciapisters.com

Prof. Dr. Holger Schulze

*1970, Visiting professor for Sound Studies at the Humboldt-Universität Berlin. Principal investigator of the Sound Studies Lab and director of the international research network Sound in Media Culture (both funded by the German Research Foundation DFG). Founding editor of the Sound Studies book series. Selected publications: Intimität und Medialität. Tektonik der Medien, Berlin 2012; Sound Studies. Eine Einführung, (ed.) Transcript, Bielefeld 2008; Klanganthropologie. Performativität – Imagination – Narration, (co-ed. with Christoph Wulf) Akademie Verlag, Berlin 2007; Heuristik. Theorie der intentionalen Werkgenese, Transcript, Bielefeld 2005.

Homepage: <http://www.soundstudieslab.org/author/admin/>

Prof. Mark M. Smith

*1968, Carolina Distinguished Professor of History, University of South Carolina, USA. He is a scholar of US history and the history of the senses and author or editor of a dozen books. His work has been translated into Chinese and Korean and has been featured in the London Times and the New York Times. He is a former president of The Historical Society. Selected publications: Camille, 1969. Histories of a Hurricane, University of Georgia Press, Athens GA, 2011; Sensing the Past, Seeing, Hearing, Smelling, Tasting and Touching in History, University of California Press, Chapel Hill NC, 2008; How Race Is Made. Slavery, Segregation, and the Senses. University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill NC, 2006.

Homepage: <http://www.cas.sc.edu/hist/facultyprofiles/smithmark.html>

Prof. Dr. Jonathan Sterne

*1970, Associate professor in the Department of Art History and Communication Studies, McGill University, Canada, with additional affiliations with the History and Philosophy of Science Program, the Institute for Gender, Sexuality and Feminist Studies, and the Centre for Studies in Improvisation. He has written widely on sound and music, the history and philosophy of technology, cultural studies and new media. He is editor of The Sound Studies Reader, Routledge, London, 2012. Current projects include a study of the aesthetics and politics of signal processing (funded by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada), and a study of media and the politics of inhabitability

(as part of a team funded by the Fonds Québécois sur la Société et la Culture). He is also a member of the Sound in Media Culture research network (funded by the German Research Foundation, DFG), and Centre de recherche sur l'intermédialité. Selected publications: The Audible Past. Cultural Origins of Sound Reproduction. Duke University Press, Durham NC, 2003; MP3. The Meaning of a Format, Duke University Press, Durham NC, 2012.

For more information, see his website at <http://sternetworks.org>

