

Authors

Hridaya Aijaonkar is a PhD Student at the University of Bonn, after working as Assistant Professor at the Department of English, University of Mumbai, India. She additionally serves as a Research Aide at the Indo-Canadian Studies Centre and as a Resource Person at the Centre for European Studies of the same University. Her research interests include socio-linguistics, postcolonial studies, and gender studies. She has a particular academic interest in the relationship between gender, language and cultural production in cosmopolitan pockets.

Simon Dickel is the author of the books Embodying Difference: Critical Phenomenology and Narratives of Disability, Race, and Sexuality (2022) and Black Gay: The Harlem Renaissance, the Protest Era, and Constructions of Black Gay Identity in the 1980s and 90s (2011). Among his co-edited books are Alle Uns: Differenz, Identität, Repräsentation (2022) and Queer Cinema (2018). His short film »Ready for Ransom« (2022) was selected for Dokfest Kassel and for the German Competition of the 39th Short Film Festival Hamburg.

Dagmar Ellerbrock is Professor of Modern and Contemporary History at the Technical University of Dresden. Her research interests include civilian weapon cultures, health politics and body history, memory politics and transformation research, democratization, and the history of law, emotion, and violence. She has written and published Deutsche Schießswut. Zur Transformation der deutschen Waffenkultur im 19. und frühen 20. Jahrhundert (2018) and co-edited Waffenschwestern (2014).

Andrea Feldman is Professor of History at the University of Zagreb. She received her PhD in history from Yale University. She edited the first collection on women's history: Žene u Hrvatskoj: Ženska i kulturna povijest [Women in Croatia: Women's and Cultural History] in 2004. She is the author of Imbro I. Tkalac: europsko iskustvo hrvatskog liberala (1824–1912) [Imbro I. Tkalac: European Experience of a Croatian Liberal] (2012). From 2018 to 2022 she was the project leader of »Modern Thinking Women: Intellectual Development of Women in 20th Century«, a project funded by the Croatian Science Foundation.

Axelle Germanaz is a PhD candidate in American Studies at Friedrich-Alexander-University Erlangen-Nuremberg, where she currently researches the US far right's digital and material cultures. Her dissertation, with the working title »A Climate of Crises: Surveying the Environmental Imaginaries of the US Far Right« examines the instrumentalization of environmentalism and the deployment of sentimentality by contemporary US far-right groups in an era of climate emergency. Her research interests include far-right movements, populism, and white supremacy, affect studies and sentimentality, as well as environmental studies.

Katharina Gerund is Senior Lecturer in American Studies at Friedrich-Alexander-University Erlangen-Nürnberg. She is the author of Transatlantic Cultural Exchange: African American Women's Art and Activism in West Germany (2013) and the co-editor of several volumes and special issues, including Black Womanhood in Popular Culture (2018) and The Lexicon of Global Melodrama (2022). Her research interests cover affect studies and sentimentality, feminism and women's studies, critical race theory, and critical military studies. Her current book project is entitled »Happy Home Front Heroines? Military Spouses in the Cultural Imaginary of the U.S.«.

Teresa Hiergeist is Professor of French and Spanish Literature and Cultural Studies at University of Vienna. Her research interests include alternative conceptions of society and education, literary, media, and cultural enactments and instrumentalizations of social unity and diversity, para-societies, human-animal relations in literature and culture just as literary and cinematic negotiations of physiognomy, corporeality, monstrosity, humanity, and animality. She works on the early modern period, the turn from the 19th to the 20th century, and the present time.

Martin Holtz earned an MA and a PhD in American Studies from the University of Greifswald in Germany. He has published two books: American Cinema in Transition: The Western in New Hollywood and Hollywood Now (2011) and Constructions of Agency in American Literature on the War of Independence: War as Action, 1775–1860 (2019). He currently teaches American literature and film at the University of Graz in Austria.

Johanna Kluger is a research assistant at Rheinische Friedrich-Wilhelms-Universität Bonn in the North American Studies Program. She has a B.A. in Creative Writing from the University of Winchester and wrote her master's thesis at the Universität Osnabrück on the changing archetype of the romance novel hero in response to social and political change during the Trump Era.

Ganna Kolesnik received her PhD in Literature at the Shevchenko Institute of Literature, the National Academy of Sciences, Kyiv, Ukraine in 2009 with a thesis about the Modifications of Literary Biography in the works of Peter Ackroyd. Her research interests are the contemporary rewriting of fairy tales, fantasy fiction, YA fiction, historiographical metafiction and postmodern literature.

Stefanie Mayer is a university assistant in French and Spanish Literature and Cultural Studies at the Department of Romance Studies at the University of Vienna. She is currently working on her doctoral project, in which she investigates conceptions of female authorship in 21st century Mexico. Her research interests lie in contemporary Latin American literature and cinema, with a focus on gender issues.

Stefanie Schäfer is visiting Professor of North American Studies at Friedrich-Alexander-University Erlangen-Nürnberg and a former Marie-Curie fellow at the University of Vienna, where she worked on the project TACOMO (Transatlantic Cowgirl Mobilities). Her research in North American Studies covers Literary, Feminist and Gender Studies, Visual and Popular Culture, and Mobility Studies.

Lena Seauve leads her own externally funded research project at the Institute for Latin American Studies of the Freie Universität Berlin. After writing her PhD-thesis on the Enlightenment writer Jean Potocki, she is now working on a habilitation project on the emotionalization of readers through narratives from perpetrator perspectives as a narrative strategy. Her research focuses on narrative and reception theory, narrative literature of the 18–21st centuries, Shoah and witness literature and the representation of violence in literature.

Mareike Spychala is a research assistant and lecturer at the University of Bamberg's American Studies section. Her award-winning dissertation focuses on autobiographies by female veterans of the Iraq War and on the intersections of gender and imperialism in these narratives. She has co-edited the collection Fighting for the Future: Essays on Star Trek: Discovery (2020) and the conference proceedings War and Trauma in Past and Present: An Interdisciplinary Collection (2019).

Jörg Türschmann is Professor for French and Spanish Literature and Media at the Department of Romance Studies, University of Vienna. His research interests are transnational relations between literature and cinema in Argentina, Spain, France, the Caribbean and Canada, moreover their relations with German-speaking countries. Furthermore, he is interested in television series, popular culture and film music. He obtained a PhD about French Film Theory and wrote his habilitation thesis about 19th century serial novels in Spain, France and Italy.

Hana Vrdoljak is a PhD candidate in American Studies at Friedrich-Alexander-University Erlangen-Nürnberg and a member of the research training group The Sentimental in Literature, Culture, and Politics (funded by the German Research Foundation). Having completed the Interamerican Master's program The Americas/Las Américas, she is currently working on her dissertation entitled »Hip Hop Sentimentality«, which aims to identify and systematically explore sentimental elements in works by African American rappers in order to analyze their forms and function. Her primary research interests include hip hop studies, feminist theory, as well as representations of race and gender in (popular) culture and literature of the Americas.

