

Contents

Acknowledgements	9
------------------------	---

Introduction: Health, Security, and Identity	11
--	----

Part I: Framed by Theory: Security, Biomedical Science and the Biosecurity Individual

1. “We hold these truths to be self-evident”: Performativity and Security in the U.S.
American Cultural Archive	25
Making it New: Security as Speech Act	26
Promising Futures – Haunting Pasts: Security and Reiteration	30
“What Happens to A Dream Deferred?”: Security and Deferral	34
2. Science as the Arbiter of Security: The Rise of Prevention and Pre-emption	39
The Rise of Medicine as Normative Power: Biological Security and the Logic of Prevention	40
Changing Frames – Changing Expectations: the (Bio)Medicalization of Life and the Expansion of the Medical Security Narrative	50
Imagining Total Control: Militarization of Biological Security and the Logic of Pre-emption	59
3. Reading the Signs: The Biosecurity Individual, Biomedicalization, and Biomedical Salvation	67
The Power of Translation: The Biosecurity Individual and the Vision of Total Control	68
Help Yourself, So Help You Science: The Question of Responsibility and Choice	72
Fictions of Security: Biosecurity and Good Life	74
4. The Biosecurity Individual and the Drama of Biosecurity: Performance, Performativity, and Affect	79
Speaking Bodies: Biosecurity, Embodied Identities, and the Body as Stage	82
Bodily Matters: Biosecurity, Intangible Materiality, and the Body as Actor	86
Marked by Feelings: Biosecurity and the Force of Affect	91

Part II: Fictions of Biosecurity

5. Writing Life – Writing Security: Alice Wexler’s Mapping Faith and the Emerging Biosecurity Individual	103
Threatened by Nature and Culture: A Short History of Huntington’s Disease	105
Biosecurity, Huntington’s Disease, and the Individual at Risk: From a Number to an Identity	109
Precarious Normality and Troubled Happiness: Defining Security and Risk	114
Reading the Body – Translating Certainty: Performativity and Security	121
Promising Knowledge and Scientific Salvation	125
Making Security – Writing Life	132
6. Performing Futures: Breast Cancer, Pre-emption, and the Biosecurity Individual	139
Performativity, Biosecurity Culture, and the Breast Cancer Movement	142
Test and Testimony: Becoming a Previvor and a Biosecurity Individual	149
The Affective Fact: The Doom of the Breast Cancer Apocalypse as a Question of Time	156
Hope and Fear: The Choice for Security and the Script of Previval	160
Performing Security: Able-Bodied Femininity and the Other	166
Making Security – Making Community	170
7. Escaping Biosecurity? The Question of Security in Dying and the Possibility of Doing it Otherwise	175
Dying Well and in Time: A Shifting Narrative of Security	177
Fearful Visions: The Threat of Dehumanization and the Relationality of (In)Security	182
The Promise of Security and the Proper Way to Die: Agency, Choice, and Acceptance	190
Not without my Doctor	198
Making Security: Disease Activism and Affective Legislation	202
8. Failed Futures: Biomedical Security and the Biosecurity Individual in Fiction	207
Failed Future in Nathaniel Hawthorne’s “The Birth-Mark”	210
Failed Future in Gary Shteyngart’s Super Sad True Love Story : The Very Near Future	222
Past – Present – Future	237
“Know Thyself”: Self-Surveillance and Securing the Self in an Age of Digital Biocapitalism	241
Works Cited	257