

CONTENTS

|                                                       |   |
|-------------------------------------------------------|---|
| Introduction . . . . .                                | 9 |
| Brigitte Holzer, Arthur Vreede, Gabriele Weigt |   |

Concepts and Beliefs about Disability in Various Local Contexts

|                                                                                          |    |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| Stigma or Sacredness. Notes on Dealing with Disabilityin an Andean Culture . . . . . | 27 |
| Ina Rösing                                                                        |    |

|                                                                                                 |    |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| Everyone Has Something to Give. Living with Disabilityin Juchitán, Oaxaca, Mexico . . . . . | 44 |
| Brigitte Holzer                                                                          |    |

|                                                                                                                                                                  |    |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| Defining the Role of Religion and Spirituality in theLives of Persons with Disability in the Fatick Region,Senegal, and the Mono Region, Benin . . . . . | 58 |
| Erick V.A. Gbodossou                                                                                                                                      |    |

|                                                                                            |    |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| Folklore Based Analysis for a Culture-Specific Conceptof Inclusive Education . . . . . | 78 |
| Joseph Kisanji                                                                      |    |

|                                                                                    |    |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| Blindness in South and East Asia:Using History to Inform Development . . . . . | 88 |
| M. Miles                                                                    |    |

|                                                                                          |     |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Some Cultural Representations of Disability in Jordan:Concepts and Beliefs . . . . . | 102 |
| Majid Turmusani                                                                   |     |

|                                                                  |     |
|------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Bio-Medical versus Indigenous Approaches to Disability . . . . . | 114 |
| Sophie Kasonde-Ng'andou                                   |     |

|                                                                                                                      |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| The Use of Non-Western Approaches for Special Educationin the Western World. A Cross-Cultural Approach . . . . . | 122 |
| Friedrich Albrecht                                                                                            |     |

Concepts of Disability with Regard to Migrants

|                                                                                                                 |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Meanings of Disability for Culturally Diverse andImmigrant Families of Children with Disabilities . . . . . | 135 |
| Maya Kalyanpur                                                                                           |     |

|                                                                                                                                                              |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Social Welfare or Socio-Political Entitlement:Disabled People Caught between the Poles of TheirTunisian Origin and Acculturative Pressures . . . . . | 146 |
| Mustapha Ouertani                                                                                                                                     |     |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                      |     |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| The Problem of Special-Educational Advancement of Childrenfrom Migrant Families – Integrative Help in the Regular Schoolsto Prevent Multiple Processes of Social Separation . . . . . | 154 |
| Kerstin Merz-Atalik                                                                                                                                                                           |     |

Disability and Knowledge Transfer in the Field of Development Cooperation

|                                                                                     |     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Local Knowledge and International Collaborationin Disability Programs . . . . . | 169 |
| Patrick J. Devlieger                                                         |     |

|                                                                                                                       |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Possibilities for Working with Cultural Knowledge inthe Rehabilitation of Mine Victims in Luena, Angola . . . . . | 178 |
| Ulrich Tietze                                                                                                  |     |

|                                                                                                                                                    |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Socio-Cultural Representation of Disability in TargetGroups of Rehabilitation Work: Examples fromHandicap International Projects . . . . . | 192 |
| Francois DeKeersmaecker                                                                                                                     |     |

|                                                                                                                   |     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Incorporation of Knowledge of Social and CulturalFactors in the Practice of Rehabilitation Projects . . . . . | 199 |
| Dee Burck                                                                                                  |     |

|                                                                                                             |     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| The Importance of Cultural Context in Training for CBRand Other Community Disability Services . . . . . | 208 |
| Sheila Wirz                                                                                          |     |

|                                                                                                         |     |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Western(ised) Personnel from the Practice ofRehabilitation Projects versus Local Cultures . . . . . | 222 |
| Harry Finkenflügel                                                                               |     |

|                                                                                                                                               |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Differing Perceptions of the Principle of ParentParticipation: Implications for Asian Familiesof Children with Disabilities . . . . . | 234 |
| Maya Kalyanpur                                                                                                                         |     |

|                                                                                                                      |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Formal Handling Routines. Child Rearing Practices inJamaica and Their Relevance to Rehabilitation Work . . . . . | 242 |
| Annette van der Putten                                                                                        |     |

“Nothing about us without us.” Case Studies of Self-Help Movements

|                                                                                                                  |     |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Meeting Women’s Needs. Women and Girls withDisabilities in the Practice of Rehabilitation Projects . . . . . | 251 |
| Jenny Kern                                                                                                |     |

|                                                                                                                                                     |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| “We don’t need to be cured first in order to live”:Self-Help in Oaxaca, Mexico (An Accountof an Interview with German Perez Cruz) . . . . . | 268 |
| Brigitte Holzer                                                                                                                              |     |

|                                                                |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| The Pan-African Movement of People with Disabilities . . . . . | 274 |
| Joshua T. Malinga                                       |     |

|                                             |     |
|---------------------------------------------|-----|
| Self-Determined Living in Germany . . . . . | 277 |
| Ottmar Miles-Paul                    |     |

Towards New Approaches in the Study of Disability in an Intercultural Framework

|                                                                                                                       |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| General Issues in Research on Local Conceptsand Beliefs about Disability . . . . .                                | 285 |
| Nora Ellen Groce                                                                                               |     |
| Developing Local Concepts of Disability:Cultural Theory and Research Prospects . . . . .                          | 297 |
| Patrick J. Devlieger                                                                                           |     |
| Towards a Methodology for Dis -ability Researchamong Ethno-Cultural Minorities . . . . .                   | 303 |
| Parin Dossa                                                                                                    |     |
| Disability Research in Cultural Contexts:Beyond Methods and Techniques . . . . .                                  | 314 |
| Kofi Marfo                                                                                                     |     |
| Some Thoughts on Definitions and a Methodologyof Cross-Cultural Research Pertaining to Disability . . . . .       | 323 |
| Arthur Vreede                                                                                                  |     |
| Issues of Disability Assessment in War Zones . . . . .                                                                | 332 |
| William Boyce, Seddiq Weera                                                                                    |     |
| The Participatory Rapid Appraisal Method of Researchon Cultural Representations of Disability in Jordan . . . . . | 343 |
| Majid Turmusani                                                                                                |     |
| Using Historical Anthropology to Think Disability . . . . .                                                    | 352 |
| Henri Jacques Stiker                                                                                           |     |
| Authors . . . . .                                                                                                     | 381 |