

Contents

Acknowledgements	9
1. Introduction	11
2. Activism by, with and for migrants in Hamburg	23
2.1 We'll Come United—Anti-racist parade in Hamburg (September 29, 2018)	23
2.2 Positionality	26
3. Methodology	31
3.1 Philosophical background and relevant methodologies	32
3.1.1 Activist and participatory methods	33
3.1.2 Ethnomethodologies or ethnographic research	36
3.2 Constructivist grounded theory	37
3.2.1 Data generation	40
3.2.2 Data analysis	41
3.3 Practical implementation	43
3.3.1 Field and case selection	43
3.3.2 Constructivist GTM	48
3.4 Ethics	51
4. Migrant rights activism as a research subject:
Conceptual approaches and relevant literature	55
4.1 State-of-the-art: How migrant rights movements are being studied	56
4.1.1 Migration studies	59
4.1.2 Critical Citizenship studies	63
4.1.3 Social movement studies	69
4.2 Identifying gaps and consolidating my own approach	78
4.2.1 Four sensitizing concepts sorting the field	78

4.2.2	Identified gaps in the literature	81
4.2.3	Setting the stage: Conceptualizing solidarities	85
5.	Negotiating Solidarities: Empirical findings	89
5.1	Feeling the Need to Be Political	91
5.2	Experiencing the Self Through Collectivity	103
5.3	"We Are All Activists"	112
5.4	Making the Social Political	124
5.5	Solid Fluidity of Alliances	134
5.6	"We Have Not Finished"	143
5.7	Summary of the storyline	153
6.	Discussion: Exploring Transversal Solidarities in migrant rights activism ..	155
6.1	Intersection of differences: how inequalities challenge solidarities	156
6.2	Variety in activities: how everyday politics build solidarities	169
6.3	Ambivalence of success: how relationalities negotiate solidarities	181
6.4	Summary: Exploring Transversal Solidarities	192
7.	Some practical thoughts	199
8.	Conclusion	207
	List of literature	215