

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	7
Preface	9
Introduction: The Structure of Feeling in the 1990s	19
Millennial turn and crisis management	19
Who is not afraid of feminism? – New Laddism as a relapse into pre-feminist behaviour?	27
The male confessional novel as a middlebrow phenomenon of the 1990s	30
Outline of the book	34
PART I: THEORY AND CONTEXT
Changing Narratives – Changing Societies	39
The 1990s: a short overview	40
The literary landscape of the 1990s	47
The crisis of identity	55
Identity and narration	66
The structure of feeling	68
Masculinities and their crises	72
Confessional Writing: The (Re)Construction of a Literary Genre	81
Genus and its application: the problem of genre	81
From gender to genre: male-authored books – towards une écriture masculine	88
The male confessional novel as a late modern type of Bildungsroman	95
The confessional mode	101
The problem of inadequacy	111

Cultural Studies and Popular Culture:
Struggling with a Problem Child	117
High culture versus low culture: subverting a dichotomy	118
Cultural studies' predicament or the spectres of Marxism	126
What is popular culture?	133
The profane makes secure: popular culture and the everyday	138
Popular fiction and genre: the face and its brows	141
Deconstructing the popular: iterability and the politics of reading	146

PART II: WRITING IDENTITY IN THE MALE CONFESSIONAL NOVEL

Structures of Obsessions	159
Musical excess in High Fidelity	160
Lost in the Land of Love in My Legendary Girlfriend	190
Sleepless in London in Time for Bed	212
Structures of Non-Commitments	235
Friends versus wife in White City Blue	237
Procrastinating marriage in Mr Commitment	259
Structures of Prolonged Adolescence	275
Men will be boys in About A Boy	277
Single fatherhood in Man and Boy	300
Having it both ways in The Best A Man Can Get	321
Conclusion	339
Epilogue: The Lad Lit Project	345
Appendix: Interview with Nick Hornby	357
Bibliography	369