

1

ASIAN CONNECTIONS

Between Affirmation and (De)Construction — Introduction _____ 12

2

ASIANISMS

in the USA
after World War II _____ 32

- The Construction and Function of Asianisms _____ 34
- Actors in the Formation of Asianist Categories in Visual Aesthetics _____ 55
- Asianisms in the Reception of American Art after 1945 _____ 79

3

POSSIBLE READINGS

Encounters with the Asian in Martin's Working Situations _____ 84

- The Asianist References of the Artist and of Others in the Reception of Her Work _____ 87
- The Artist Figure Agnes Martin between European and Asianist Myths of the Artist _____ 103
- Contact Zones to the Asian _____ 136

4

ASIANIST VISUAL AESTHETICS

Asianisms and Other Culturalisms in Agnes Martin's Work _____ 150

4.1

- Diffuse and Activating Grounds _____ 153
- Glazed Color Field Delineation in New York from 1957 Onward _____ 154
- Comparison with Mark Rothko and Modernist Visual Discourses _____ 157
- Philosophical Concepts of Dao in Chinese Shan Shui (Mountain-Water) Paintings _____ 164
- Involving the Body as Transformational Aesthetics _____ 171
- "Perceptual Fields": Fields between the Viewer and the Image _____ 180
- Experiments with Grounds and Surfaces in the "Constructions" _____ 188

4 . 2

Primacy of the Line: Materiality, Calligraphy, Fiber Art, and Indigenous Art	190
Nonfiguration as an Asianist Category	193
Insistence on the Hand(iwork)	201
Handwriting: Unfinished and Porous Strokes	209
Line, Ground, Canvas, Striations	215
Textile Approaches: Exchange with the Fiber Artist Lenore Tawney	220
Impulses from Coptic Textile Art and Indigenous Art Practices of the Hopi and Navajo	233
Links between the Media of Painting and Drawing	236

4 . 3

The Grid:

Abundance in the Void	239
An Emblem of Modernity	243
Grid and Diagram: The Double Game	246
Cosmological Concepts: Tantric Yantras and Sandpaintings of the Hopi and the Navajo	253
The Grid in the Everyday Worldly Environment	262
References to One-Point Perspective: Renaissance Windows and Representation Critique	267
Representation Critique: Grid and Screen	271
Asianistic Concepts of Abundance and Void	275
“Matrixial Borderspace” and Authorship	284

4 . 4

The Image-Generating Methods of Iteration and Imperfection

Nonidentical Repetition and the Multiplicity of Variations	299
Multiplication as a Convention in Asian Art	301
Agnes Martin’s Grid Paintings and Ad Reinhardt’s “Last Paintings”	303
Reduction through the Simplicity and Modularity of Sets of Forms	305
Seriality and Regularity in Minimal Art: Sol LeWitt, Donald Judd, and Hanne Darboven	308
Ritual Regularity, Producing Lines, Meditating	319
Traditions and Progress: Cyclical Concepts of Time	326
Imperfection: Variations on Gaps and Slips	331
Imperfection: Raku Ceramics and the Concept of Wabi-Sabi	332

5

TRANSCULTURAL PERSPECTIVES

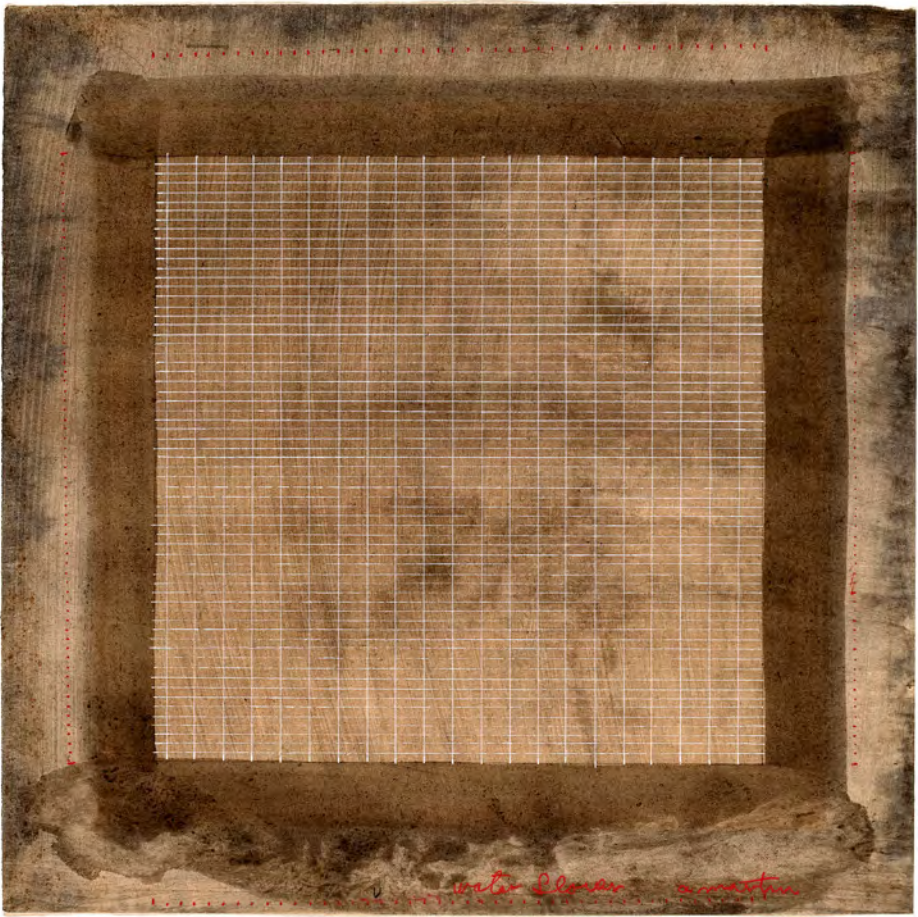

Summary—Prospects	340
-------------------------	-----

Appendix

Sources	353
Bibliography	355
Index of Images	374

FIG . I Water Flower, 1964, National Gallery of Art, Washington, DC

AGNES MARTIN
TRANSCULTURAL TRANSLATIONS

1