

Acknowledgements

Throughout the development of this book, I have been helped by a wide swathe of people, places and things which provided support and guidance. Firstly, I would like to thank my main supervisor Max Liljefors, who wouldn't describe it this way, but for supporting a Korean–American woman from New York in a predominantly homogeneous, Scandinavian academic environment at the department in Lund and in the wider academic field of Art History and Visual Studies in Sweden. During my position at the university I have been reminded several times of a level of radical open-mindedness he has had in his support of my research and I am eternally grateful. I am also indebted to him for his eloquent, humorous, clear and always hopeful guidance in discussions throughout the research and writing process. His sustaining belief in the value of my work, especially in moments when I didn't have it myself was a source of immense support in the long and at times, arduous process of writing.

Thank you to my colleagues in the Department of Arts and Cultural Sciences at Lund University, the Digital Cultures Research Node and especially to those within my division of Art History and Visual Studies. Special thanks to Peter Bengtsen for his generosity in sharing his practical knowledge and navigating the bureaucracy of academic and grant funding institutions, Erika Larsson for support, discussion and friendship and Ludwig Qvarnström for help in Swedish language translation. I would also like to thank the community of doctoral students in the wider department and a special thanks to Dr. Lisa Olsson Dahlquist for friendship and comradery during the final phases of writing. I am also thankful to my students enrolled in the Visual Culture Master's Program (2016–2018 and 2018-2020) for the engaging discussions held in class and in seminars, covering much of the theoretical framework in this book.

I would like to acknowledge and thank the funding institutions of Dr. Uno Otterstedt's Fund and William Karlsson's Scholarship Fund at Lund University whose issuing of travel grants greatly benefitted this project.

Thanks to my co-supervisor Robert Willim for his inspired dialogue and feedback, Marta Braun for a supportive reading on an early, grammatically-challenging sketch of the eigenface chapter, Nanna Thylstrup and Daniela D'Agostinho for their helpful suggestions midway through the process and Liv Hausken for her informed reading and comments on a close to completed manuscript. A sincere thanks also goes to Tim Carter for a thorough and nuanced job of proofreading.

My research was greatly developed and bettered through discussions held with scholars at the conferences I participated in. I'd like to give acknowledgement to the participants of the "Precarious Aesthetics" conference held at UC Berkeley (2015), the "Uncertain Image" workshop at University of Copenhagen (2017) and the "Facial Machines" symposium held at the University of Aarhus, DK (2018). A special thanks also goes to the scholars of the Uncertain Archives research group at the University of Copenhagen, whose organization of pertinent events and invitations to participate throughout my research, deeply informed and pushed my work forward.

I'd like to acknowledge and give a special thanks to the artists included in this study for their intelligence and generosity: Zach Blas, Thomas Ruff and especially Trevor Paglen for fun discussions in Berlin. Thanks to the Film Archives of the Museum of Modern Art, New York for access to the video archives and textual materials of Harun Farocki and to Louise Wolthers at Hasselblad Foundation for guided access to the "Watched!" exhibit.

Thanks also to those who have aided in one way or another through discussions concerning the research, writing and the thinking process: Caroline Holmqvist, Henrik Lund Jørgensen, Johan Röing, Maria Norstedt, James Conant, Brooke Belisle, Anthony Paré, Arild Fetveit, Fred Ritchin, Tom Mitchell and Anders Michelsen.

An enduring gratitude goes to my friends and family without whom I wouldn't be here: First and foremost, JC, my partner who truly makes it all possible and to my daughter Lulu, for whom the possibilities are endless. I am grateful to you both for bringing me down to earth and surrounding me with love. To my sister, Jennie Jieun Lee and Graham Collins, my oma, Hea Young Lee and step-father, Peter Kim and to extended family Pete Chung and Patty Lu. I would also like to thank my friends who aided me in coming to Sweden in the first place, Jenny and Clay Ketter and Karin and Alex Hartley. Special thanks to Barbara Pollack for her initial encouragement to re-enter academia and for support commiserate in writing. Also, a heartfelt thanks goes to Anna Delarosa for always helping me see myself in the process.

Lastly, I'd also like to acknowledge a place: "Kallis" in Malmö for always giving me the depth of a framed horizon and an open sky to look at; offering clarity, sustenance and breathing space throughout.
