

Contents

---

Acknowledgements .....	7
1. Introduction .....	9
2. There is Something in the Air
Climate, Literature, and the Atmospheric Turn .....	31
2.1 Towards an Aesthetics of Literary Atmospheres .....	31
2.1.1 In the Presence of Absence: The Atmospheric Experience .....	36
2.1.2 Literary Spheres: Text, Contact, and the Reader .....	41
2.2 Material Ethics and the Affective Agency of Atmospheres .....	58
2.3 Gothic Nature and Uncanny Atmospheres .....	70
2.4 Entering a New Dark Age: Atmospheric Re(lation)ality and the Anthropocene Imagination .....	93
3. Being Polluted in the Global Garb-Age
The Corporeal Dimension of Toxic Atmospheres in John Burnside's Glisten and Alexis M. Smith's Marrow Island .....	109
3.1 Posthuman, Post-Nature, and Lit(t)erature .....	109
3.1.1 "Nothingness haunts being": Experiences on the Threshold between Toxic Spaces and the Self in Glisten .....	119
3.1.2 "Clustering out like fungi": Liminal Modes of Being in Marrow Island .....	137
3.2 Making Sense of Embodied Permeability .....	153

4. Reading Matters, Material Readings
Traces of Agency in Jeff VanderMeer's The Southern Reach Trilogy .....	157
4.1 Weird Terrors and Other Terrors .....	157
4.2 Traces of Atmospheric Agency .....	168
4.3 Atmospheric Agency of Literary Traces .....	187
5. Going Glocal
Spatial Dissonance and The Multiscalar Experience of Ambient Literature .....	201
5.1 Glocal Points of Access .....	201
5.2 Ambient Literature and the Storying in and of Spacetime .....	210
5.3 Where to Read from Here: Duncan Speakman's It Must Have Been Dark By Then .....	221
6. Conclusion
Atmospheric Disturbances in Turbulent Times .....	239
7. Bibliography .....	255