

Acknowledgements

This book emerged from a workshop initiated by Erich Hörl, Oliver Leistert and Martin Savransky called Thinking the Problematic, held at Leuphana University Lüneburg in June 2017.¹ The workshop was as part of a research theme of the research project CCP | Complexity or Control. Paradigms for Sustainable Development, funded by the Volkswagen Foundation from 2015 to 2019. Most of the contributions to this book had been presented initially at the workshop. The editors thank all participants for shaping an exciting discussion: Didier Debaise, Thomas Ebke, Craig Lundy, Celia Lury, Patrice Maniglier, Esther Meyer, Dimitris Papadopoulos – and in particular Erich Hörl for sparking the discussion and Martin Savransky, who we also had the pleasure to host as a visiting fellow at our project. We also thank Jeremias Herberg, Gregor Schmieg and the whole CCP team for their curiosity, openness and patience for the topic, Ina Dubberke for the smooth institutional support, and Selena Class for rapid, but nonetheless thorough, proofreadings.

¹ For a full line-up and the programme see <https://www.leuphana.de/zentren/cgsc/aktuell/termine/ansicht/datum/2017/06/22/workshop-thinking-the-problematic.html>.

