

Contents

Acknowledgments	7
-----------------------	---

Introduction.....	9
-------------------	---

Part One: The Eighteenth Century

Historical Background.....	21
----------------------------	----

Preamble	21
----------------	----

Readability and Corporeality in Lavater	25
---	----

Reading in the Eighteenth Century	29
---	----

The Readable Body in the Eighteenth Century	32
---	----

Reading the Body in the Eighteenth Century.....	36
---	----

The Body in Perspective: Sophie von La Roche's Geschichte des Fräuleins von Sternheim (1771).....	49
---	-----------

La Roche on Lavater and Physiognomics	50
---	----

Causation and Corporeal Visibility.....	52
---	----

Multiperspectivism and Corporeal Visibility.....	61
--	----

Experimenting with Multiperspective Narration.....	71
--	----

Part Two: The Nineteenth Century

Historical Background.....	83
----------------------------	----

Preamble	83
----------------	----

The Rationalized Body and Its Discontents.....	92
--	----

The Body as “Versable” Type: Friedrich Spielhagen's Zum Zeitvertreib (1897).....	107
--	------------

Body Language and Dress as Markers of Social Ambivalence	110
--	-----

Why Ambivalence?	118
------------------------	-----

The Making and Unmaking of Types.....	120
---------------------------------------	-----

Part Three: The Twentieth Century

The Soul-Stripped Body: Alfred Döblin's Berlin Alexanderplatz (1929)	133
The Case Against Psychology	133
Döblin's Anti-Psychologism in Literary-Theoretical Perspective	140
Döblin's Anti-Psychologism in Medical-Scientific Perspective	142
Anti-Psychologism and the New Media	153
Anti-Psychologism as Political Engagement	160
Conclusions	171
Bibliography	175
Index	189