

Contents

Acknowledgements	9
Introduction	11
Chapter 1: “Anthropocene”	25
Introduction: “Romanthropocene”	25
The Anthropocene and its Critics	31
Romantic Criticism in the ANTHROPOcene	39
Gendering “Nature” and the Sublime in Romantic Criticism	51
Women Writing “Nature” and Climate Change in the Early Anthropocene	56
Conclusion	72
Chapter 2: “Steam”	75
Introduction: Steam	75
William Wordsworth “On the Projected Kendal and Windermere Railway”	80
Joanna Baillie: “Address to a Steam-Vessel”	92
Henry David Thoreau, Walden and the Railway	106
In Conclusion: Gender, Access and Steam-Powered Travel	125
Chapter 3: “Apocalypse”	137
Introduction: Climate Apocalypse and the Sublime	137
George Gordon Lord Byron: “Darkness”	145
Mary Ann Browne: “A World Without Water”	158
Romantic Apocalypse in Mary Shelley’s The Last Man	170
Conclusion	202
Chapter 4: “Mushrooms”	205
Introduction – Mycological Romanticizations	205
Romantic Mushrooms	209
Romanticizing Mushrooms	219
Mycelial Entanglements and the Arts of Noticing	228

Imagining a Mushroom Perspective 235

In Conclusion: Mushrooms, Gender and Positionality 243

Conclusion251

Works Cited261