

Contents

1	Introduction: Coming to Terms with Biopolitics, Temporality and Historic Justice	9
1.1	From Times Believed Long Overcome	9
1.2	Coming to Terms with the Presence of the Past	13
1.3	Biopolitics and the Threshold of Modernity	14
1.4	Biopolitical Temporality	18
1.5	Biopolitics, Historic Justice and Injuries of Normality	21
1.6	Outline of the Book	25
2	Biopolitics and Modernity: Revisiting the Eugenics Project	29
2.1	A Modern Project	32
2.2	Eugenics and Social Reform	35
2.3	Eugenics and the Question of Race	37
2.4	Welfare Eugenics	43
2.5	Eugenics and Feminism	45
2.6	Biologist Determinism and Social Engineering	48
2.7	Eugenics, Progress and Productivism	51
2.8	Conclusion	53
3	Nazi Sterilization Policy, Second-Order Injustice and the Struggle for Reparations	55
3.1	The Hereditary Health Act and its Biopolitical Rationality	60
3.2	No 'Forgotten Victims': Non-Reparation Policy after 1945	62
3.3	The 1980s: The Struggle Gains Momentum	68
3.4	Reparations as the Greater Injustice?	69
3.5	Ostracization or Annulment	72
3.6	Comprehensive Rehabilitation?	74

4	Justice at Last: The Persecution of Homosexual Men and the Politics of Amends	77
4.1	“Exterminating the Disease”: The Nazi Persecution of Homosexual Men	79
4.2	Normal Persecution: Paragraph 175 in the Federal Republic	83
4.3	Banned from Reparations	87
4.4	Regret and Reluctance	90
4.5	From Injuries of Normality to Sexual Exceptionalism	92
4.6	Conclusion	96
5	Marginal Justice: Coming to Terms with the Persecution of the ‘Asocials’	99
5.1	Model Germany?	102
5.2	Doing Justice – or not. The Performative Politics of Historic Justice	103
5.3	The Nazi Persecution of the ‘Asocials’	105
5.4	Meaningful Work and Orderly Life	108
5.5	Excluded Victims	109
5.6	Forgotten ‘Forgotten Victims’?	111
5.7	Commemoration Beyond the State	117
5.8	Conclusion	118
5.9	Addendum	119
6	Hannah Arendt and Michel Foucault on Biopolitics, Time and Totalitarianism	121
6.1	Life and Labor	123
6.2	Total Management	126
6.3	Politics, Life and Modern Temporality	127
6.4	Improving Life	131
6.5	Living in the Interval	134
6.6	Beyond Biopolitics: Zur Welt Kommen	136
7	Increasing the Forces of Life: Biopolitics, Capitalism and Time in Marx and Foucault	141
7.1	Missing the Link: Biopolitics and Capitalism	141
7.2	Biopolitics as Biotechnology	142
7.3	Biopolitics as Self-Government	144
7.4	Power and Productivity	147
7.5	Enhancing the Forces of Life	153
7.6	The Time of Capital and Biopolitics	157
7.7	Conclusion	160

Acknowledgments	163
List of Abbreviations	165
References	169

