

Contents

I	Introduction: On Post-Yugoslavia and the Female Continent	7
I 1.	Post-Yugoslav Literature: A Utopia and a Field	15
I 2.	A Feminist Framing of the post-Yugoslav Literary Field	23
I 3.	Summary	32
II	Women's Writing and Critical Nostalgia: On Ildiko Lovas' Fiction	35
II 1.	Borders of Time and Space and Authorship: "Via del Corso I"	41
II 2.	On Real and Fictional Identities: "Stvarni konobar"	47
II 3.	Totalitarianism and Misogyny: "Zlatna priča"	56
III	Post-Yugoslav Écriture Féminine	65
III 1.	Tanja Stupar Trifunović's Satovi u majčinoj sobi : 'Writing the Body' as a Signpost	73
III 1.1.	To Meet the (M)other	75
III 1.2.	Female Difference and Writing	80
III 2.	Tea Tulić's Kosa posvuda : How to Write the Death of Mother	85
III 2.1.	Female Camaraderie vs. Real World	86
III 2.2.	Back to Chora ? On Mother and Writing	92
III 3.	Ivana Bodrožić's Hotel Zagorje : The Death of the Father and the Coming of Age as the War Novel	97
III 3.1.	To be a Refugee: Internalization and Reproduction of Enmity	99
III 3.2.	Lures and Fears of Coming of Age	105
III 3.3.	An Absent Witness to the Father's Death	110
IV	The Other Writing: Atonement and Female Authorship in Snežana Andrejević's and Luka Bekavac's Fiction	117
IV 1.	Snežana Andrejević's Životu je najteže : A 'Two-faced' Narrator	119
IV 1.1.	On the Front Line: Trans, Trance	129
IV 2.	Luka Bekavac's Drenje and Viljevo : Beyond Severed Ends of Space and Time	134
IV 3.	The Medium is the Message: Female Voices and Sound	143

V	What to Do With the Past? Feminist Literary Historiographies I:
	Olja Savičević Ivančević's Adio, kauboju	151
V 1.	On the Real, Fictional and Female Cowboys	153
V 2.	Staging the Western. Why the Past Does Not Fit the Present?	156
V 3.	Saint Fjoko Festival: Difference and the Carnevalization of Gender	162
V 4.	The Body/House Trope: Essentialization and Emancipation	168
V 5.	Marija Čarija's Western: Righteousness and Tragic Heroine	175
V 6.	Migrant, Worker, Author: An Open End as the Beginning	180
VI	What to Do With the Past? Feminist Literary Historiographies II:
	Slobodan Tišma's Bernardijeva soba	189
VI 1.	Objects of the Past, Past of the Objects: Past as Belonging(s)	193
VI 2.	Parental Home: On (Im)possible Identifications	200
VI 3.	Pol and Politika : Women in Pairs and the Politics of Literature	207
VI 4.	Colonizing a Utopia: Jouissance , Difference and Authorship	223
VI 5.	Neo-avant-garde and Feminist Foundations of post-Yugoslav Literature	229
	VI 5.1. Appendix: Situationist International and the Esoteric Neo-avant-garde in Bernardijeva soba	245
VII	Conclusions. Inherited Possibility, Or: Choosing The Optimal Variant	251
	Bibliography	257