

Sarah Kessler
Competing Climate Cultures in Germany

The series is edited by Arbeitskreis SONA Soziologie der Nachhaltigkeit.

Sarah Kessler (Dr.) is a social scientist at the Institute for Social Change and Sustainability at Wirtschaftsuniversität Wien. She obtained her doctoral degree at the Department of Geography, Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität (LMU) Munich, Germany. She works on topics spanning environmental sociology, sustainability research, practice theory, science communication and digital ethnography. Currently, she investigates group-specific societal receptions of climate change, climate-cultural diversity and issues of responsibility, efficacy and knowledge regarding climate protection.

Competing Climate Cultures in Germany

Variations in the Collective Denying of Responsibility and Efficacy

[transcript]

The text and wording of this book almost exactly correspond to my doctoral thesis that was supervised by Henrike Rau at the Department of Geography at the LMU München. It was defended and published in the summer of 2022. Only minor revisions were undertaken for this book publication.

This publication has been funded by the Bavarian network for climate research (bayklif).
