

Acknowledgements

As a young woman who went through her architecture studies feeling like something was missing, I would like to thank Sabine Knierbein for opening my eyes to the hidden layers of the urban context that have yet to find their way into mainstream architecture education. I would like to thank her not only for her contagious passion with which she addresses the complexity of the urban landscape, but for her support and words of encouragement. I would equally like to express many thanks to Oliver Schürer for the interesting discussions we have had and for inviting me into his critical ways of thinking. Without either one of you this book would not have been the same.

Furthermore, I would like to thank the many people who similarly put their trust in me and who helped me make this publication possible. Thank you to Anne C., Anne M., Arja, Carla L., Carla S., Caro, Cata, Daniel, David, Didi, Ervin, Esther, Flo, Gunnar, Huub, Irina, Ivana, Jana, John, Josef, Julio, Kurt, Laura, Lisa, Lisa-Marie, Martin R., Mona, my parents, Nadine, Niki, Olivera, Olivia, Oswin, Rita, Romana, Sebi, Simon, Sophie B., Sophie H., Srdjan, Toni, Theo, Tiphaine, Tony and Zach. Your support means a lot to me.
