Alexander Winkler (Zuse-Institute, Berlin)

The Neulateinisches Jahrbuch (= NlatJb), indexed in ERIH PLUS, publishes scholarly articles and shorter gleanings on Neo-Latin authors and topics, as well as editions of Neo-Latin texts. Other standard sections of NlatJb are reviews, reports and proposals of scholarly projects, as well as announcements of other initiatives in the area of Neo-Latin studies.

Contributions may be submitted in any of the following languages: English, French, German, Italian, Latin, and Spanish.

An abstract in English (regardless of the language of the article) of about 150 words, and about six keywords, also in English, should introduce the texts in section I.

Manuscripts should be sent in electronic form (in Word-, rtf- or pdf-format) to the Editor-in-Chief: m.laureys@uni-bonn.de

The receipt of every incoming manuscript will be promptly acknowledged.

Deadline for submitting contributions: December 31, for inclusion in the following year's volume, space permitting.

Every submitted article will be subjected to a double-blind peer-review process. As soon as this evaluation process has been concluded, the author will be informed whether his/her paper has been accepted or rejected. In the case of rejection, the decision will be final, and there will be no further correspondence with the author about it. If a contribution is accepted for publication, the editors may still suggest such corrections or modifications as they see fit. These suggestions will be communicated in an evaluation report. The revised text should be submitted no later than two months afterwards via e-mail as a Word- or rtf-file (and, in addition, a pdf-file, when special characters have been used) to the Editor-in-Chief and to the Production Editor: steiner-weber@uni-bonn.de When formatting their texts, authors should painstakingly respect the guidelines on the website:

Please note:

NlatJb cannot guarantee to publish reviews of books sent unsolicited.
