

Contents

1. Introduction9

Part I: Theoretical background

2. Volunteer tourism

 Critical reflection and state of the art 21

2.1 Outlining volunteer tourism 22

2.2 Academic discussions on volunteer tourism 27

2.3 The agents of volunteer tourism 31

 2.3.1 Volunteer tourism providers..... 31

 2.3.2 Voluntourists 37

 2.3.3 Host communities 48

2.4 Summary 52

3. The Shuar

 History, ethnographic accounts, and contemporary issues 55

3.1 From colonization to the present 56

3.2 The ‘Shuar proper’ 63

3.3 Residential patterns and livelihood 65

3.4 Sociality and social landscape 67

3.5 Arútam: Spiritual power and the development of selfhood 70

3.6 Current challenges 73

3.7 Tourism in the ethnography of the Shuar 73

3.8 Summary 75

4. Case of study

 The community of Arútam and the history of FUNDECOIPA77

4.1 A walk through the village.....77

4.2 The community of Arútam 81

4.3 A way to independence: The formation of FUNDECOIPA 82

4.4	Structure and organization of the tourism projects	87
4.5	Summary	90
5.	Methods and positioning
	Reflections about the research process	93
5.1	Access to the field	93
5.2	Methods and data collection	97
	5.2.1 Participant observation	98
	5.2.2 Qualitative interviews and informal conversations	100
	5.2.3 Quantitative data and document analysis	101
5.3	Position as researcher	102

Part II: Empirical analysis

	Voluntourist and host community interactions and relations in focus	107
	A volunteer's journey	109
6.	Routinizing volunteer tourism
	The organization of the volunteer encounter	117
6.1	Shaping the encounter with voluntourists	118
	6.1.1 Schedules	119
	6.1.2 Staff roles	121
	6.1.3 Spatial arrangements	123
	6.1.4 Work activities	128
6.2	Fostering experiences	129
	6.2.1 Of nature	130
	6.2.2 Of Shuar culture	133
6.3	Managing forms of conduct	139
6.4	Summary	143
7.	Translating, asking, chatting
	Everyday communication between the Shuar community and voluntourists	147
7.1	Communicating in a polyglot context	148
7.2	Inquiring about the voluntourists and their background	154
7.3	Shaping images of the self and of others in conversation	162
	7.3.1 Relationships with the natural environment	163
	7.3.2 Conversations about Shuar culture	191
	7.3.3 Discussing extractivism, politics, and Indigeneity in Arutam	208
7.4	Summary	255

8. Building close relationships
The affective dimensions of the volunteer tourism encounter	259
8.1 Forming relations: Friendship and romance	260
8.2 Demonstrating friendships and networks	268
8.3 Summary	274
9. Discussion
The agency of host communities in volunteer tourism	277
9.1 Everyday strategies in the volunteer tourism encounter	278
9.2 Motives for participation in volunteer tourism	282
10. Conclusion	287
10.1 Strategies and motives of engagement in volunteer tourism	289
10.2 Life projects in Arútam	290
10.3 Agency in the everyday: Contribution and future possibilities	292
10.4 Afterthought	294
Reference list	297
List of abbreviations	315
Acknowledgements	317

