

Short biographies of the authors

Dirk Ansoerge, Dr. theol., born in Gelsenkirchen (Germany), advanced studies in philosophy, theology, and physics at universities in Bochum, Jerusalem, Strasbourg, and Tübingen. 1993 doctorate degree in Catholic Theology (Tübingen), 2008 postdoctoral lecture qualification (Habilitation) in Catholic Theology (Münster). 1993 – 2009 instructor and lecturer at Catholic Academy of the diocese of Essen. 2009-2010 visiting professor in Vienna. 2010-2011 lecturer at Jesuit Faculty Sankt Georgen (graduate school of philosophy and theology). Since 2011 professor for dogmatic theology. Since 2014 vice-rector of the Faculty. Member of the steering committee of the ifthf-project 'Islamic Peace ethics'. Multiple publications on religion, policy, and violence, particularly in the Middle East, and on dialogue between Judaism, Christendom, and Islam.

www.sankt-georgen.de, ansorge@sankt-georgen.de

Abdessamad Belhaj has a PhD in Islamic Studies (2001, Rabat, Morocco) and a PhD in Political and Social Sciences (Catholic University of Louvain, Belgium, 2008). Currently, he works as a researcher and lecturer at the Catholic University of Louvain in Belgium and is a research fellow at the Hungarian Academy of Sciences. His latest book The Ethical Thesis: Practical Reason in Islamic Legal Hermeneutics was published in 2015.

belhaj.abdessamad@gmail.com

Seyed Hassan Eslami Ardakani (1960-) is an Iranian theologian and ethicist. He studied Islamic philosophy, theology and jurisprudence at Qom Seminary and philosophy of religion at the State University of Qom, Iran. Currently, he is Professor of Philosophy of Religion and Ethics at University of Religions and Denominations, and teaches mainly global ethics, environmental ethics, bioethics, mystical ethics, morality and religion, Islam and human rights, and philosophy of religion. He is specialized in Islamic theology and applied ethics and has authored many articles and some books in these areas, including Human Cloning in Catholic and Islamic Perspectives (2007), The Ethics of Criticism (2003) and On Expedient Lies: Meaning and Examples (2003).

eslami@urd.ac.ir

Oliver Leaman is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Kentucky. He is the author and editor of books on Islamic and other kinds of philosophy and theology, and his most recent book is Controversies in Contemporary Islam, Routledge, 2013. He has edited for Routledge The Qur'an: An Encyclopedia, 2006, Ninian Smart's World Philosophies, 2008, and co-written Islam: the Key Concepts, with Kecia 'Ali, 2008. He is the author of Islamic Aesthetics, Notre Dame University Press, 2004. He is the author of Key Concepts in Eastern Philosophy, 1999 and Eastern Philosophy: Key Readings, 2000, and has just finished the second edition of his Biographical Encyclopedia of Islamic Philosophy, published by Bloomsbury this year. He is the book review editor for Islamic philosophy for the journal Philosophy East and West and on the editorial board of the Islamic Studies section of Oxford Bibliographies Online. His The Qur'an: a philosophical guide, is due to be published next year by Bloomsbury.

oliverleaman@gmail.com

Simona E. Merati is Research Fellow at Middle East Studies at Florida International University in Miami, FL, USA. She is the author of Muslims in Putin's Russia: Discourse on Identity, Politics, and Security (Palgrave, 2017). Her further research interests are Islam in International Relations, in particular in the Eurasian region, Russian foreign policy, international relations of Eurasia, and international political economy of Eurasia. Dr. Merati holds a Ph.D. in International Relations from Florida International University and a M.A. in Russian Language and Literature from the University of Milan, Italy.

smera001@fiu.edu, simona.merati@gmail.com

Najia Mukhtar is in the final year of her PhD at the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS). She is a founding committee member of the Muslim South Asia Research Forum (MUSA), a multi-disciplinary, global research network housed at SOAS, that offers a platform to young scholars researching Muslim societies in South Asia <https://www.soas.ac.uk/south-asia-institute/musa/>. In 2011, Najia obtained an MSc in Comparative Politics from the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE). Prior to commencing her MSC, Najia worked for 8 years as a management consultant at Pricewaterhouse Coopers LLP in London. She completed her BA in Economics from the University of Cambridge in 2002.

najia.mukhtar@googlemail.com

Charles M. Ramsey is Assistant Professor of Religion and Public Policy at Forman Christian College in Lahore, Pakistan. He holds a PhD in Islamic Studies (Birmingham), and degrees in History of Religion (Baylor University), and Poverty Reduction (London, SOAS). Some of his recent publications include South Asian Sufis: Devotion, Deviation, and Destiny, (London: Continuum, 2012; New Delhi, Bloomsbury 2017); “Anti-Saint or Anti-Shrine?: Tracing Deobandi Disdain for Sufism in Pakistan,” in Sufism, Pluralism, and Democracy, eds. Clinton Bennett and Sarwar Alam (Sheffield: Equinox, 2017); and Sir Sayyid and the Religious Foundations for a Pluralist Society,” Sir Syed Ahmad Khan Muslim Renaissance Man of India: A Bicentenary Commemorative Volume (New Delhi: Viva Books, 2016). His research interests include Islam and Modernity, South Asia, Peace Building, Spiritual Theology, and Scriptural Hermeneutics.
charlesramsey@fccollege.edu.pk

Sybille Reinke de Buitrago is researcher at the ITHF and at the Institute for Peace Research and Security Policy at the University of Hamburg. She conducted her PhD on threat perceptions in US and German security policy. She earned her BA and MA in International Affairs from American University in Washington, DC. Her research is placed in the fields of international relations, security policy and peace research. In particular, she focuses on processes of identity, perception and discourse and how these interact and shape political behavior. She has published among others in Global Affairs, the Journal of Terrorism Research, the Journal of Strategic Security, and Asian Politics & Policy.
sybille.rdeb@gmail.com

Yahya Sabbaghchi was born in Tehran, Iran 1979. He is Assistant Professor of Islamic Theology at Center of Islamic Knowledge and Humanities, Sharif University of Technology in Tehran, Iran. He holds a PhD in Modern Theology (University of Qom, Iran) and a M.A. in Islamic Philosophy and Theology (University of Qom). He also studied Islamic Jurisprudence and Islamic Mysticism in the Seminary of Qom. He earned his B.S. in Electrical Engineering. He is the author of a chapter entitled “Starting a War: Advised or Forbidden?” in "The Changing Places and Faces of War", edited by Sarah A. Wagner and Peter Mario Kreuter, Inter-Disciplinary Press, 2014. He has also published some articles in English and Persian, including: ‘Afterlife Punishment: permanent or temporary?’, ‘Fine Tuning Argument and God of Gaps’, ‘Global Islam and the approaches to its promotion’, ‘Jizya: Compulsory or Voluntary? A Revision on the Concept of Jizya in Islam’, and ‘Rationality and Peace in Islam’. His research interests include Islamic and Comparative Theology, Peace studies, Islamic Jurisprudence and Sociology of Religion.
Sabbaghchi@Sharif.edu, ysabbaghchi@gmail.com

Heydar Shadi is research fellow at Sankt Georgen Graduate School of Philosophy and Theology in Frankfurt and Institute for Theology and Peace in Hamburg, Germany. He is currently the director of a joint research project under the title of “Islamic peace ethics”.

Heydar Shadi was born in 1975 in Marand, Iran and studied philosophy and classic (Islamic)liberal arts in Tabriz, Qom, and Tehran, Iran. He did his PhD (2013) at Erfurt University, Germany on philosophy of religion in post-revolutionary Iran. He worked as lecturer and researcher at academic centers including Berlin-Bradenburgian Academy of Sciences and Tehran University of Medical Sciences. His research interests include, among others: intercultural philosophy, Islamic(ate) intellectual history, historiography and identity in the Middle East.

Some of his recent publications are: “Charles Taylor's ethical critique on modernity”, “Some methodological remarks on Islamic peace ethics”, "Epistemology in Abdolkarim Soroush's philosophy", and “Globally post-colonialist and locally colonialist: a critique on 'Iranian nationalist historiography”.

heydarshadi@gmail.com

Bianka Speidl graduated in History and Arab and Islamic studies from Pázmány Péter Catholic University, Hungary. She earned her PhD in Islamic Studies at the University of Exeter in May, 2015. In her dissertation she elaborated on the Conceptualisation of Power in Muhammad Husayn Fadlallah's al-Islam wa mantiq al-quwwa, under the supervision of Prof. Robert Gleave. Currently she is a research fellow in a Research Group of Contemporary Religious Culture pertaining to the Hungarian Academy of Sciences at the University of Szeged, Hungary. She works as a Middle-East Analyst in the Budapest based Migration Research Institute.

biaspeidl@gmail.com

Asfa Widiyanto is a senior lecturer at the State Institute for Islamic Studies (IAIN) Salatiga, Indonesia. From March 2011 – May 2013, he undertook post-doctoral research at the department of political science at the University of Marburg and the department of Islamic studies at the University of Bamberg, which was sponsored by the Alexander von Humboldt-Foundation and supervised by Prof. Dr. Claudia Derichs and Prof. Dr. Patrick Franke. He completed his bachelor's degree at the State Institute for Islamic Studies (IAIN) Surakarta and his master's studies at Leiden University. His doctoral degree was obtained from the University of Bonn, under the supervision of Prof. Dr. Stephan Conermann and Prof. Dr. Eva Orthmann. His current publications include: Religious Authority and the Prospects for Religious Pluralism in Indonesia: The Role of Traditionalist Muslim Scholars; 'The Reception of Seyyed Hossein Nasr's ideas within the Indonesian Intellectual landscape'; 'Constitution, Civil Society and the Fight against Radicalism: The Experience of Indonesia and Austria'; and 'Salahuddin Wahid and the Defence of Minority Rights in Contemporary Indonesia'.

asfa.widiyanto@googlemail.com

