

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements | 7

Introduction | 9

Asian American: Ghosts as Identity Markers and a (Feminist) Historiography | 14

Ghosts as Pan-Ethnic Constructions in Diversified Asian America | 27

Global/Transnational Asian America: Ghosts as
Self-Reflexive Figures | 34

1 “risk the violence of reading the ghost” – Theoretical Reflections on Ghost Figures | 51

Psychoanalytic and Poststructuralist Ghosts | 52

Literary Ghosts | 66

2 Postcolonial Melodramatic Ghost Figures: Signs of Dis-ease in Lois-Ann Yamanaka’s Behold the Many | 79

Seth: An Unreadable Ghost Figure | 81

Behold the Many as Postcolonial Melodrama | 98

3 Traditions of Haunting: The Narration of a Ghostly Self and a Family’s Ghosts in Heinz Insu Fenkl’s Memories of My Ghost Brother | 121

Life Writing: Narrating a Ghostly Self | 125

Family Hauntings: Folk Knowledge and Psychoanalytical

Ghost Figures | 139

4 Renegotiating a Global Asian America: The Ghost in Global Genre Fiction by Amitav Ghosh, Amy Tan, and Ed Lin | 169

Haunting Postcolonial Alternatives in Amitav Ghosh’s

The Calcutta Chromosome | 179

A Visit to Politically Charged Territories in Spirit:

Amy Tan’s Ghost Narrator | 201

Global Genre Fiction and Ghost Beliefs in Ed Lin’s Ghost Month | 221

Global Asian America: The Ghost Between Tradition
and Innovation | 236

Conclusion | 239

Works Cited | 245