Preface

This treatise and practitioner guide is the outcome of a meeting of international sales law scholars held 27–28 September 2013. The purpose of the meeting was to provide a foundation for writing a comprehensive book that would be useful to teachers, scholars, and students of international sales law, as well as to act as a single volume reference guide for the international transactional lawyer. The group members set out the ambitious goal of providing a comprehensive and practical treatise on the complex and broad area of international sales law. The contributors come from numerous countries and include in alphabetical order the following international sales law scholars: Orkun Akseli (Durham University Law School), Michael Bridge (London School of Economics and Political Science), Petra Butler (Victoria University of Wellington), Michel Cannarsa (Catholic University of Lyon), Giuditta Cordero-Moss (University of Oslo), Larry A. DiMatteo (University of Florida), Sieg Eiselen (University of South Africa), Edoardo Ferrante (University of Turin), Harry M. Flechtner (University of Pittsburgh), Christian Fleischmann (University of Bayreuth), Claire M. Germain (University of Florida), Rafael Ilescas Ortiz (Carlos III University of Madrid), André Janssen (City University of Hong Kong), Sörren Kiene (Brandi Rechtsanwälte), Qiao Liu (University of Queensland and Xi'an Jiaotong University), Ulrich Magnus (University of Hamburg), Burghard Piltz (Ahlers & Vogel), Willibald Posch (University of Graz), Séverine Sainter (University of Exeter), Martin Schmidt-Kessel (University of Bayreuth), Reiner Schulze (University of Münster), Lisa Spagnolo (Monash University), Bruno Zeller (University of Western Australia), and Wentong Zheng (University of Florida).

For the civilians, a restatement or digest is generally a clarification of existing legal rules and principles. However, restating and clarifying existing case law has also been the goal of private law codification in common law countries. Examples include the United Kingdom Sale of Goods Act 1979 and the Real Property Law Statutes found in American state laws. These statutes intended purpose is to clarify an often expansive and chaotic case law. This book, however, follows the lead of the American Restatements of Law, which provides a descriptive summary of existing law while at the same time reaching normative conclusions on divergent approaches or interpretations found across nation states and international legal instruments. The book attempts to transcend divergences in national and supranational sales laws in providing alternative and practical solutions to the issues most relevant to international sales transactions.

This restatement of international sales law, by necessity, employs a comparative law approach. But, the comparative analysis goes beyond the traditional nation-to-nation or legal tradition versus legal tradition analyses. Globalization and regionalization in the marketplace has resulted in the production of numerous regional and international hard and soft law instruments. Thus, the book's work is not so much that of harmonization as it is of synthesis of a plurality of sources.

The current undertaking samples legal rules from various legal systems and international instruments. At the same time, the legal analysis in the book is placed in the context of international sales practice. It seeks to educate on alternative legal approaches to sales contract issues in order to provide practical advice on how the international transactional lawyer should address these issues in their contracts.

In the end, the book's immersion of various legal instruments—United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods (CISG), UNIDROIT Principles of International Commercial Contracts (PICC), Principles of European Contract Law (PECL), the proposal for a Common European Sales Law (CESL), German Bürgerliches Gesetzbuch (BGB), Spanish Código Civil, French Code Civil, United Kingdom Sale of Goods Act 1979, American Restatement (Second) of Contracts, Uniform Commercial Code (UCC), and Chinese Contract Law—provides the base knowledge needed to understand the nuances of international sale law and to best represent business clients.

We would like to thank the sponsors that provided the funding for this endeavor: Levin College of Law (University of Florida), Warrington College of Business Administration (University of Florida), University of Florida Center for International Business Education and Research (CIBER), University of Florida Division of Research, and the Department of Management and Legal Studies at the Warrington College of Business. Finally, we kindly thank Aleksandra Socik and Jonathon Watson for their support in the preparation of this guide.
