

Contents

Acknowledgments	7
1. Introduction	9
1.1 Intimacy and illegality: an entanglement	12
1.2 Researching intimate relationships in illegality	14
1.3 Overview of the book	16
1.4 On terminology	19
2. Illegality	21
2.1 Constructing and deconstructing illegality	21
2.2 The concept of migration regime	23
2.3 Germany: history of its migration regime and current migration legislation	25
2.4 Paths in and out of illegality	30
2.5 Living (in) illegality	32
3. Intimacy, family and the state	37
3.1 Family migration: state policy and academic reflection	37
3.2 'Marriages of convenience'	47
3.3 Policing the intimate borders of the nation through "technologies of love"	51
3.4 "Bargaining with the devil": illegality, intimate ties, migrants and the state	53
4. Intimacy as an analytical lens	57
4.1 Theorising intimacy and intimate relationships	57
4.2 Which intimacy? A working definition	62
4.3 'Doing intimacy' in illegality: an intersectional analysis of power relationships	65
4.4 The concepts of emotional labour and emotional capital	68
5. Methodology	73
5.1 Methodological Framework: Feminist Epistemology	73
5.2 Access to the field and participant recruitment	77
5.3 Research material and analysis	82

6. Ethical issues	89
6.1 What is research ethics, and why do I practice it?	89
6.2 Should illegality be researched at all? Reflections on ethics in practice	92
6.3 Is research always an act of betrayal? On secret knowledge, representation and the power of naming.....	94
6.4 Ethically important moments	99
7. Intimacy in illegality: participants' stories	107
7.1 Ties that (don't) matter	107
7.2 Farewell to romance? Intimate negotiations and boundary-making around marriage and motherhood.....	117
7.3 The price of support: Ambivalence, power relationships and resistance	134
7.4 Illegality and violence.....	151
7.5 Strained Mothering	164
8. Intimate capital and the reproduction of inequalities	181
8.1 Intimate relationships in illegality: an intersectional perspective	181
8.2 Intimate capital	187
9. Conclusions	191
References	199
Transcription rules	225