

Table of Contents

List of Tables | 7

List of Illustrations | 9

Acknowledgements | 11

1. The Victorian Family Magazine and Historical Culture | 13

Introduction | 13

Serialised History in the Leisure Hour, 1852-1860 | 24

Structure of the Study | 29

Theoretical and Methodological Approaches | 31

PART I: THE LEISURE HOUR IN THE PERIODICAL MARKETPLACE

2. The Leisure Hour and the Disputed Genre of the Family Magazine in the 1850s and 1860s | 45

First and Second Generation Family Magazines | 46

Debates on Reading Matter and the Popular Press | 48

»A New Weekly Magazine«: The Leisure Hour as Intermediary | 51

New Illustrated Magazines and Changes in the Periodical Market | 61

3. History for the Working Man:

The Leisure Hour and the London Journal, 1852 | 71

Overview | 72

Leisure Hour | 77

London Journal | 87

4. Images of History: The Leisure Hour, Good Words
and the Cornhill Magazine, 1860 | 99

Overview | 102

Leisure Hour | 108

Good Words | 122

Cornhill Magazine | 128

PART II: SERIALISING HISTORY IN THE LEISURE HOUR

- 5. Serialising History into and out of the Leisure Hour:
The Periodical and Book Transfer | 139
Non-Fiction Series on the Past in the Leisure Hour
and their Book Counterparts | 143
Case Studies (1): From Book to Periodical | 152
Case Studies (2): Monthly Parts | 162
- 6. Writing History for the Family Audience:
Between Popular and Academic | 179
Writing on the Past for the Leisure Hour: The Contributors | 180
John Stoughton: Between Popular and Academic History | 185
Writing History for the Family Audience: »Shades of the Departed
in Old London« | 192
Continuation, Variation and Negation of Stoughton's
Narrative Pattern | 209
- 7. Conclusion | 221

APPENDIX

Appendix A: Tables | 227

Appendix B: Excursus – Fictional Series on the Past
and Their Book Counterparts | 279

Appendix C: Contributors on the Past in the Leisure Hour (1852-1870) | 283

References | 293

Index | 331