

Contents

Acknowledgements	9
Introduction	11
Contextualisation	12
Key concepts	15
Aims, methods and scope	17
Contributions to museum research and practice	21
On the structure of the book	23

I. Participatory Museum Work with Forced Migrants

1. Contextualising Participation in Museums	29
1.1 Museums and their (wider) infrastructures	30
1.2 Making participation possible?	42
1.3 Conclusion	54
2. Participatory Projects with Forced Migrants	57
2.1 daHEIM: Glances into Fugitive Lives	58
2.2 Museum Takeover	64
2.3 So sehe ich das...	69
2.4 Aleppo	74
2.5 Conclusion	79

II. Outcomes or Consequences?

3. Networking 'Communities'	85
--	----

3.1	Inviting 'communities'	86
3.2	Building relationships	98
3.3	Conclusion	108
4.	Processes of Empowerment	111
4.1	Shifting power relations	112
4.2	Aspects of (dis)empowerment	122
4.3	Conclusion	132
5.	The Museum as a 'Safe Space'	135
5.1	Creating a 'safe space'	136
5.2	Maintaining a 'safe space'	147
5.3	Conclusion	158
6.	Towards a Changed Discourse?	159
6.1	Contextualising forced migration in the museum	161
6.2	The forced migrant as the 'other'	168
6.3	Conclusion	185
7.	Material Remnants and Digital Ruins	187
7.1	Collecting material remnants	189
7.2	Practicalities of collecting	200
7.3	Extending the projects into the digital realm	209
7.4	Conclusion	219

III. Challenging Neo-Colonial Museum Practices

8.	Developing Infrastructures and Sustainable Ethics	223
8.1	Overview	224
8.2	Developing museum infrastructures to facilitate participation	226
8.3	Sustainable outcomes and consequences	230
8.4	Ethics in neo-colonial museums	234
9.	Towards Evaluation-based Participatory Museum Work	239
9.1	Main findings	241
9.2	Implementing lessons	247

9.3 A proposal for future research 249

Bibliography 253

Primary sources 253

References 255

