In 1991 Buchanan wrote,
About secession, states, and what he'd note,
Democracy and small states, a link so clear,
New ethnic and political collectives will appear.
As law and economy globalise their ride,
New nationalists worldwide, up the Clyde, coincide.

World politics and sports that sway,
Education, faith, all and more in play,
My book shows, with Scotland's might,
How statehood forms in world society's light.
In the nation's embrace, identity's swell,
Politics navigates its own distinct trail.

At FIW, I found my ground,
A place where questions do abound.
Multidisciplinary and so grand,
Politics, science, religion: research hand in hand.
Lunchtime chats and colloquia bright and wide,
In proposals and publications we unite and divide.

Rudolf Stichweh, thanks to you,
For insights witty and questions true.
To Mrs. Laube, Mrs. Bernard too,
Making global research becomes true.
Evelyn, Pascal, friends that reappear,
Through cycling, research, always near.

My family, thanks for standing by,
From mason to science, aiming high.
Late nights, we did endure,
Your love and strength, my constant cure.
To my wife, kids, endless dear,
This book I dedicate, so near.
The basis 'for all that' is to read,
Thanks to Anneliese, I did succeed.
