

Content

---

Preface | 9

Chapter 1—Introduction | 11

- 1.1 Prologue – An exemplar of “aging well” | 11
- 1.2 Introducing the thematic domain and background of the study | 13
  - 1.2.1 Lack of meaning-generating narratives about later life | 13
  - 1.2.2 Aging in an era of self-realization | 15
- 1.3 Objectives of the study | 18
- 1.4 A hermeneutic approach | 19
- 1.5 Some terminological issues | 21
- 1.6 Positioning the study in the philosophical and gerontological field | 26
  - 1.6.1 Positioning in moral philosophy | 26
  - 1.6.2 Positioning in gerontology | 27
- 1.7 Chapter outlines | 29

Chapter 2—Living and aging in late modernity | 33

- 2.1 Introduction | 33
- 2.2 Late modernity, an era of self-realization? | 34
- 2.3 Features and dynamics of the late modern world | 35
  - 2.3.1 A life of one’s own: reflexive individualization | 36
  - 2.3.2 Living in a post-traditional context | 38
  - 2.3.3 A globalizing world | 40
  - 2.3.4 Structural and systemic influences on individualized lives | 41
  - 2.3.5 Repression of meaning and morality | 43
  - 2.3.6 The moral identity crisis of late modern man | 45
- 2.4 Implications for late modern aging | 46
  - 2.4.1 A (much) longer life in a complex world | 47
  - 2.4.2 Individualization and diversification: an old age of one’s own? | 47
  - 2.4.3 Third Age and Fourth Age | 49
  - 2.4.4 Structural and systemic dynamics impacting late modern aging | 52
  - 2.4.5 Aging well as an individual responsibility | 53
  - 2.4.6 Existential vulnerability and the fragile experience of meaning | 55

- 2.5 Conclusion | 58
  - 2.5.1 Ambivalences of self-realization in late modernity | 58
  - 2.5.2 Reframing late modern self-realization discourse | 59

Chapter 3—Cultural narratives and counter narratives about aging | 63

- 3.1 Introduction | 63
- 3.2 Cultural narratives and counter narratives | 64
  - 3.2.1 Cultural (master) narratives and their role in identity-building | 64
  - 3.2.2 Damaging effects of cultural narratives | 67
  - 3.2.3 Moral agency and the importance of recognition | 69
  - 3.2.4 Narrative repair through agency-enhancing counter narratives | 73
- 3.3 Cultural narratives about later life | 76
  - 3.3.1 Cultural and critical gerontology on the cultural positioning of aging | 76
  - 3.3.2 Decline narratives | 79
  - 3.3.3 Age-defying narratives | 81
  - 3.3.4 Limitations of existing cultural narratives on aging | 83
- 3.4 Conclusion: In search of viable counter narratives about aging | 86

Chapter 4—Self-realization | 93

- 4.1 Introduction | 93
- 4.2 Introducing self-realization | 94
  - 4.2.1 The purpose of self-realization | 96
  - 4.2.2 The self in self-realization | 101
  - 4.2.3 The practice of self-realization | 106
  - 4.2.4 The timing of self-realization | 109
- 4.3 Exploring the best in us | 112
  - 4.3.1 Selected historical and philosophical interpretations of the best in us | 113
  - 4.3.2 Three threads: autonomy, authenticity and virtue | 117
- 4.4 Self-realization and aging | 120
  - 4.4.1 Self-realization and the shrinking of the future | 120
  - 4.4.2 Self-realization and radicalization of existential vulnerability | 123

Chapter 5—Narrative identity and moral agency | 127

- 5.1 Introduction | 127
- 5.2 Introducing narrative identity | 128
  - 5.2.1 Life and self as stories | 128
  - 5.2.2 The relation between life and narrative | 130
  - 5.2.3 Narrative integration and unified personhood | 132
  - 5.2.4 Narrativity and aging | 134

- 5.3 Three interpretations of narrative identity | 136
  - 5.3.1 Marya Schechtman – Narrative self-constitution | 136
  - 5.3.2 Hilde Lindemann – Narrative identity as a social practice | 139
  - 5.3.3 Kim Atkins – Narrative identity and moral identity | 142
- 5.4 From narrative identity to moral agency | 145
- 5.5 Conclusion: composing a definition of moral agency | 153

Chapter 6—Autonomy | 159

- 6.1 Introduction | 159
- 6.2 Introducing autonomy | 160
  - 6.2.1 Historical roots of autonomy discourse | 160
  - 6.2.2 Harry Frankfurt: A dominant contemporary account | 162
- 6.3 Selected alternative accounts of autonomy | 163
  - 6.3.1 Charles Taylor: Autonomy and the strong evaluation of desires | 164
  - 6.3.2 Laura Ekstrom: Autonomy and the coherence of our value orientation | 165
  - 6.3.3 Diana Meyers: Autonomy and the conditions of its practicability | 166
  - 6.3.4 Relational view: Autonomy, interdependence, socialization and power | 169
- 6.4 Autonomy in the context of aging | 174
  - 6.4.1 Harry Moody: The communicative approach | 175
  - 6.4.2 George Agich: The phenomenological approach | 176
  - 6.4.3 Martha Holstein and colleagues: The relational approach | 178
- 6.5 Evaluation of the discussed accounts on autonomy | 180
- 6.6 Conclusion: Towards an individuating conception of autonomy | 182

Chapter 7—Authenticity | 189

- 7.1 Introduction | 189
- 7.2 Introducing authenticity | 190
- 7.3 Selected philosophical accounts of authenticity | 194
  - 7.3.1 Jean-Jacques Rousseau and his Romantic heirs | 194
  - 7.3.2 Existentialist views of authenticity | 197
  - 7.3.3 Charles Taylor's ethics of authenticity | 203
  - 7.3.4 Diana Meyers – Authenticity and intersectional identity | 205
- 7.4 Authenticity in the context of aging | 207
  - 7.4.1 Spiritual perspectives on aging | 207
  - 7.4.2 Existential perspectives on aging | 209
  - 7.4.3 Art of living perspectives on aging | 210
- 7.5 Evaluation of the discussed authenticity accounts | 212
- 7.6 Conclusion: Towards authenticity as a social and moral practice | 215

Chapter 8—Virtue | 219

- 8.1 Introduction | 219
- 8.2 Introducing virtue | 219
- 8.3 Selected accounts of virtue ethics | 223
  - 8.3.1 Aristotle: Virtue as ‘nobility of the soul’ | 223
  - 8.3.2 Alasdair MacIntyre: Virtue as a remedy for the modern “moral crisis” | 226
  - 8.3.3 Christine Swanton: Pluralistic virtue ethics | 229
- 8.4 Virtue in the context of aging | 235
- 8.5 Evaluation of the discussed virtue accounts | 239
- 8.6 Conclusion: Towards virtue as attitudinal concretization of moral agency | 244

Chapter 9—Conclusion | 251

- 9.1 Introduction | 251
- 9.2 Recapitulation of the argument | 252
- 9.3 Advancing older people’s moral agency | 257
- 9.4 Objections to the self-realization discourse | 264
  - 9.4.1 Elitism/demandingness objection | 265
  - 9.4.2 Self-centeredness objection | 266
  - 9.4.3 Social structure/social justice objection | 266
  - 9.4.4 Western/masculine bias objection | 268
  - 9.4.5 Moralism/paternalism objection | 269
  - 9.4.6 Mental/cognitive ability objection | 270
- 9.5 Unanswered questions | 273
- 9.6 Final thoughts | 274

References | 277