

Content

Digital Games through Muddled Pasts and Modded History

Introduction

Eduardo Luersen and James Wilson 7

I Producing Historical Games and Heritage Experiences

Source Material and the Problem of Authenticity in Historical Game Development

William Hepburn and Jackson W. Armstrong 23

Historians Making Games

Unveiling a History Game Design Ethos

Magnus Henrik Sandberg, Eirik Brazier, and Ragnhild Hutchison 41

Enchanted Imaginings

Involving Museum Visitors in Heritage Adventures

Eva Kingsepp and Linda Ryan Bengtsson 63

II Culture and Emotions as Historical Game Design Affordances

Cultural Combinatorics and Conjured Spectres

The Representation of Culture and Cultural Hybridity through the Game Mechanics of Crusader Kings III

Michael A. Conrad 85

Playing Adewale

The Politics of History in *Assassin's Creeds
Freedom Cry*

Oswaldo Cleger 113

Historical Empathy and Player Agency in Computer Roleplaying Games

Kingdom Come: Deliverance and Pentiment

Robert Houghton 137

III Revisioning, Reframing, Coding the Past

The Truth(iness) is a Lie

Historical Re-visions of the Cold War through

Call of Duty Paratexts

victoria l. braegger and Samantha Blackmon 163

Queering Hong Kong

Modded History in A Summer's End: Hong Kong 1986

Diego Barroso Sánchez 187

Calculated Actions

How Game Code Makes Arguments About the Past

James Baillie 211

Re-Enacting 9th Century Baghdad

Interview on the Narrative and Worldbuilding Aspects of the Past, as Rendered in Assassin's Creed Mirage

James Wilson, Eduardo Luersen, Raphaël Weyland, and Sarah Beaulieu 231

Biographical Notes 241

Acknowledgements 243