

Kutaiba Kaidouha

Syrian Families in Germany

The Multi-Faceted Reality of Adaptation
to a New Surrounding

Migration & Integration

edited by

Prof. Dr. Anna Mratschkowski,
FOM Hochschule, Essen

Volume 16

Kutaiba Kaidouha

Syrian Families in Germany

The Multi-Faceted Reality of Adaptation
to a New Surrounding

Nomos

Open Access funding provided by Max Planck Society.

The Deutsche Nationalbibliothek lists this publication in the Deutsche Nationalbibliografie; detailed bibliographic data are available on the Internet at <http://dnb.d-nb.de> a.t.: Univ. Erlangen-Nürnberg, Diss., 2024

1st Edition 2025

© Kutaiba Kaidouha

Published by

Nomos Verlagsgesellschaft mbH & Co. KG
Walzseestraße 3–5 | 76530 Baden-Baden
www.nomos.de

Production of the printed version:

Nomos Verlagsgesellschaft mbH & Co. KG
Walzseestraße 3–5 | 76530 Baden-Baden

ISBN 978-3-7560-2383-7 (Print)

ISBN 978-3-7489-5224-4 (ePDF)

DOI <https://doi.org/10.5771/9783748952244>

Online Version
Nomos eLibrary

D29

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License.

Acknowledgments

This book is based on my doctoral dissertation, which I worked on from 2019 to 2023 while a member of the Law & Anthropology Department, Max Planck Institute for Social Anthropology, which generously provided support for my research throughout that entire time. I am, therefore, primarily indebted to the Institute and the Department for their substantial financial support and the extensive facilities provided, without which the writing and publication of this work would not have been possible.

I am deeply indebted to Professor Marie-Claire Foblets, Director of the Department and the second supervisor of my dissertation, and to Professor Mathias Rohe, my primary supervisor, for their unwavering support at every stage of my research. Their guidance was instrumental in bringing my dissertation to fruition. Words of gratitude alone are insufficient to acknowledge their extraordinary support, which extended beyond academic guidance to personal encouragement. They helped me navigate challenges both in entering the academic field and in ensuring my stability in Germany, allowing me to focus fully on my research.

I am also sincerely thankful to Dr. Brian Donahoe, senior scientific editor, and Dr. Larissa Veters, a senior research fellow at the Institute. The establishment of the PhD Writing-up Seminar within the Department, where doctoral candidates discussed and critiqued each other's draft chapters with contributions from Brian, Larissa, Professor Rohe, and Professor Foblets, greatly enhanced the quality of my research. Their collective feedback was invaluable. Special thanks go to Dr. Mahmoud Jaraba for meticulously reviewing many chapters of this book and offering insightful comments and suggestions. I am also grateful to my colleague and doctoral candidate, Abdelghafar Salim, for his thoughtful feedback on certain chapters and, more importantly, for our ongoing discussions over coffee or lunch. These informal yet intellectually enriching conversations contributed to refining some of my research ideas, particularly given the overlap in our work on refugees, albeit from different perspectives. My heartfelt thanks also extend to Pierre Druart, a fellow doctoral candidate at the Institute, for reviewing the book and for his valuable language corrections. I further extend my gratitude to all my doctoral peers who participated in the PhD Writing-up

Acknowledgments

Seminar and shared their insights during discussions of my dissertation chapters.

I am grateful to Friedrich-Alexander University Erlangen-Nuremberg (FAU) for granting me the opportunity to earn my doctoral degree in law and for providing all the support and facilities necessary to complete this research project.

Finally, my deepest thanks go to the Syrian individuals and families who welcomed me into their homes, shared their life stories, and allowed me to include their experiences as the foundation of this book. This work would not have been possible without their trust and generosity.

Table of Contents

Introduction	13
Research question	15
State of research	18
Research structure	21
Theoretical frameworks	24
Assimilation or integration?	25
Masculinity in the Diaspora	27
Normative pluralism	31
Chapter 1: Methodological Framework: An Ethnography of Conflicts within Syrian Families in Germany	35
Introduction	35
1.1 Methodology	36
1.1.1 Why ethnography?	37
1.1.1.1 Family privacy	37
1.1.1.2 Understanding changing contexts of family life	38
1.1.1.3 The impact of the refugee and asylum experience on family life	39
1.1.2 Research group	40
1.1.3 The field site	41
1.1.3.1 Returning to the field	42
1.1.3.2 The concept of the “field”	43
1.1.3.3 Study the “there”	46
1.2 Methods	51
1.2.1 Participation observation	51
1.2.2 Qualitative interviews	53
1.2.2.1 Where and how were the interviews conducted? And with whom?	54
1.2.2.2 Type of interviews relied on to collect data	55
1.2.3 Focus group	58

Table of Contents

1.3 Data Analysis	59
1.4 Limitations	63
1.4.1 Access to women (as a target group)	63
1.4.2 Language	65
1.4.3 Differences, not conflicts	65
1.4.4 Asking the sensitive questions	66
1.4.5 Pressures related to compassion	68
Conclusion	69
 Chapter 2: No Choices to Stay there: Causes of the Displacement of Syrians and the Emergence of Conflicts within Syrian Communities	 71
Introduction	71
2.1 Insecurity and National-identity Division	74
2.2 Fear of Detention – Sectarian and Socio-political Rift	80
2.3 Protecting Children and Searching for a Future for Them	89
2.4 The Deteriorating Economic Situation and Religion Cleavage Religion cleavage	93 95
2.5 Looking for a Better Future	99
2.6 The Contexts of the Causes of Displacement and the Emergence of Conflicts within Syrian Communities	103
Conclusion	107
 Chapter 3: The New Birth: Changes and Challenges in the New German Environment for the Syrian Family	 109
Introduction	109
3.1 Theoretical Reflections on Adaptation to a New Life in Germany	110
3.2 Changes in Syrian Families – Choices and Factors	113
3.2.1 Social environment (conservative and extroverted families)	116
3.2.2 Social control	118
3.2.3 Gender	122
3.2.4 Age group	124

3.3 Challenges Faced by Syrian Families	127
3.3.1 Language	129
3.3.1.1 On the relationship between spouses	131
3.3.1.2 On the relationship between parents and adult children	132
3.3.2 Work	133
3.3.2.1 The difficulty of language which is key to the job market	134
3.3.2.2 Age	135
3.3.2.3 Finding an appropriate job	135
3.3.2.4 Job Center	136
3.3.3 Place of residence	138
3.3.3.1 Loss of privacy	139
3.3.3.2 The difficulty of finding adequate housing	141
3.3.4 The religious-cultural challenge – “the arena of persuasion”	143
3.3.5 Children’s responsibility	145
3.3.5.1 The fear of parents for their children	145
3.3.5.2 The nature of the German system towards children	147
3.3.6 Racial discrimination and racism	150
3.3.7 Feeling alienated	152
Conclusion	155
Chapter 4: Factors of Family Conflicts	157
Introduction	157
4.1 A Theoretical View of Conflict Factors – Dominance Masculinity	160
4.2 Internal Determinants of Conflict Dynamics – Clouds in Syria Rained in Germany	168
4.2.1 Gender roles	168
4.2.2 Economic factors – economic alienation	172
4.2.3 Cultural-religious clash	177
4.3 External Determinants of Conflict Dynamics	179
4.3.1 The impact of war and forced displacement – violence as a “defense” mechanism	180

Table of Contents

4.3.2 German context – new environment effects	184
4.3.2.1 Legal dimension	185
4.3.2.2 Legal Protection	187
4.3.2.3 Effects of different family laws	189
4.3.2.4 Socio-cultural context	193
4.3.2.4.1 Extramarital relations	193
4.3.2.4.2 Freedom from the shame culture	196
4.3.2.4.3 Family intervention – and loss of extended family	199
4.3.2.4.4 Freedom from arranged marriage	202
Conclusion	203
Chapter 5: Managing Family Conflicts – Alternatives and Mechanisms	207
Introduction	207
5.1 Conceptual Framework: Normative Pluralism – the Interaction of Law, Religion, and Socio-cultural Norms	209
5.2 Different Forums for Conflict Resolution	214
5.2.1 Resort to intermediaries from extended family or friends – home ownership in exchange for divorce	215
5.2.2 Resorting to religious actors – attempting jurisprudence	219
5.2.3 Recourse to judicial systems	221
5.3 Mechanisms and Obstacles to Conflict Resolution – Causes and Results	223
5.3.1 The jurisprudence of Muslim minorities – various doctrinal opinions	224
5.3.2 Limping marriage – justifications for resorting to religious marriage	227
5.3.2.1 Religious dimension	228
5.3.2.2 Customary dimension – كتاب الشيخ ktāb aš-ṣīḥ or كتب الكتاب Katb al-ktāb: marriage conducted by an imam before it is confirmed in court	229
5.3.2.3 Social aid	230
5.3.2.4 Lack of information on the mechanisms of action of the legal system	231

5.3.2.5 Lack of documents – the law does not protect ignorants	232
5.3.3 How to conduct religious marriage contracts?	233
5.4 Limping divorce – the complexities of getting divorced	235
5.4.1 Divorce under threat	237
5.4.2 Divorce in exchange for refunds	238
5.4.3 Divorce to maintain reputation	241
5.4.4 Divorce in exchange for the threat of harassment – divorce in the shadow of state law	243
5.5 “Primitive Resolutions” and the Inability of Imams	244
5.5.1 Lack of expertise on family conflict resolutions	244
5.5.2 Lack of authority to enforce decisions	246
Conclusion	248
Conclusion	251
Relation between State and religious norms	261
Position of Muslims	263
Suggestions	264
Necessity to further study relations to children	266
Bibliography	269

